Teacher Pay And City Tax Bills Pass Conference

Revenue Measure Faces House Battle; Action on Both to Be Sought Tomorrow

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Washington tax and teachers' pay increase bills were approved yesterday by a joint congressional conference committee.

A unanimous approval of the teachers' pay bill by the District leaders in the conference promised speedy passage. The bill gives most teachers a $150 annual boost over present salaries.

On the 14 million dollar city revenue bill, however, a test vote in the conference paved the way for a sharp House battle over exempting Federal employes here from the District income tax law if they have a legal domicile in a State.

All three Senate conferees and three of the five House conferees voted against the Federal employe exemption. Representatives Joseph P. O'Hara (R., Minn.) and John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) voted for the exemption.

House to Be First

The House earlier sided with O'Hara, while the Senate voted his proposed exemption out of the revenue bill.

The House will be the first to pass on the pay and revenue bills. House District Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) and House Majority Leader Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.) said they would try for House action on both bills tomorrow.

Conference decisions left both bills in the shape in which they passed the Senate. The conference report on them still must clear the Senate after the House acts.

In the teachers' bill, House approval is needed for a section guaranteeing teacher tenure rights, and another liberalizing sick leave for school attendance officers. They can take it now only for their own illness; the change would let them take it for contagious illness or a death in their homes and other pressing emergencies.

To Seek Extension

On the revenue bill, the majority of the House conferees will ask the House to join with the Senate in approving this District income tax extension plan.

While the District now can get

200,000 Bills for Taxes Held Up by D. C. Measure

Preparation of more than 200,000 real estate and personal property tax bills has been held up pending congressional action on District revenue and budget legislation.

Assessor Edward A. Dent said yesterday the bills could not be prepared until Congress takes final action on a proposed boost in personal property and real estate taxes from $1.75 to $2 for each $100 assessed value.

13 Flee Virginia Mental Hospital; 4 Still at Large

Petersburg, Va., June 25 (AP).—A mass break by 13 inmates of the men's criminal ward at Central State Hospital early today brought temporary freedom for nine and left four still at large tonight.

Six were recaptured by local police before noon, and three more were taken this afternoon in Dinwiddie County by Dinwiddie and State officers.

Dr. M. S. Brent, superintendent of the mental institution for Negroes, said none of the four remaining at large was regarded as dangerous. The only one of the 13 held on a serious charge was a 17-year-old boy who was retaken a few hours after the break.

The group gained freedom by sawing a bar in one of the second floor windows of the ward and then dropping to the ground by ropes of bed clothing, hospital authorities said.

Regardless of Russia

Bevin to Insist That Germany Have Share in Marshall Plan

London, June 25 (U.P.).—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin has definitely decided to go ahead with the plan of Secretary of State George C. Marshall for European recovery even if Russia refuses to take part, a high government source said today.

Bevin also will insist, at the Big Three conference which starts in Paris Friday, that Germany must be fitted fully into the plan despite the month-long failure of the Western Allies to get Russia's agreement to a united economic policy, the informant said.

The possibility that the western powers may have to go ahead with the Marshall plan without Russia was increased today when Pravda, Russian Communist organ, loosed another blast against it.

"If the authors of the Marshall plan follow the advice of some eager American reactionaries and offer European countries conditions copied from the Greek and Turkish example, then the failure of the proposed program will be a foregone conclusion," Pravda said, according to the Moscow radio.

"Such assistance would in fact represent interference in the domestic affairs of European countries and an infringement of their sovereignty. Such conditions are unacceptable to those European nations which relish their dignity and self-respect."

Pravda said the Marshall plan is "too general to permit determination whether it aims at a European settlement or at an ideological war between capitalism and communism."

Pravda said also that the Marshall plan was aimed at providing the United States with European markets to stave off an American economic slump.

American Undersecretary of State for Economic Affairs William L. Clayton held another long conference at No. 10 Downing st., with Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee, Bevin, Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, on the Marshall plan and European and Anglo-American economic problems.

At Paris Bevin intends to be careful not to present Russian Foreign Minister Vlacheslav Molotov with a detailed plan before Molotov has given his own ideas, so that there will be no reason for Russia to feel that Britain and France have been acting behind her back.

Thores Assails Plan

Strasbourg, France, June 25 (AP).—Maurice Thorez, leader of the French Communists, bitterly criticized the Marshall plan for this continent's recovery today, declaring it was a "western snare" aimed at creating a bloc "which would cut Europe in two."

U. S. Protests Arrest Wave In Romania

Acts Are Branded As Deliberate Move To Crush Opposition

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The United States yesterday protested sharply to Romania against a wave of arrests which has sent hundreds of opposition party members to prison or concentration camps in recent weeks.

It branded these arrests as an apparently deliberate attempt to throttle opposition to the present regime, and as a violation of the new Romanian peace treaty.

The protest was embodied in a note sent to Roy M. Melbourne, United States representative in Bucharest, for delivery to the Romanian government.

Britain Also Protests

Britain also sent a note of protest to the Romanian government against its treatment of political opponents, London dispatches said. The note will be handed to Romanian officials in Bucharest at the same time as a United States protest.

Reports from the American mission in Bucharest have convinced officials here that the Communist-dominated Groza regime is making a mockery of democratic liberties. Hardly a day has passed in the last two weeks without some new report of anti-Communists being rounded up and hustled off to jail without warrant or trial.

The protest against these events came as Secretary Marshall told reporters that he was considering further action over Hungary, where the Soviet authorities have rejected an American appeal for a three-power inquiry into the political overturn there.

May Ask U. N. Action

The Secretary declined to say what further action, if any, was being planned. Indications were that the Hungarian case, and perhaps others in Southeastern Europe, might be taken before the United Nations Assembly which meets in New York in September.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, suggested such recourse to the United Nations when Premier Ferenc Nagy was ousted from office.

Officials here knew that notes of protest, as such, have little or no immediate effect on the Communist-dominated governments receiving them. The State Department, however, believes such protests have real value, for two main reasons:

1. They encourage the non-Communist Balkan citizens who can get their contents without censorship by listening to the Ameri-

U. S. Will Let Dollar Credit To China Lapse

June 30 Deadline On 500 Millions Loan Will Be Observed

China will not get the 500-million-dollar credit earmarked for it 18 months ago by the Export-Import Bank, Secretary of State George C. Marshall indicated yesterday.

The money was set aside on condition that none of it would be paid until China put its political house in order. Last winter, when Marshall abandoned his efforts to stop the civil war in China, June 30 was fixed as a deadline beyond which the credit would not be available.

Now, with June 30 approaching, the entire credit will be allowed to lapse, Marshall indicated, and the money will be made available for loans to other countries.

Extension Doubted

The Secretary told his news conference that he doubted whether any action would be taken to help China financially before the June 30 deadline expired. Asked whether the time limit could be extended, he said such action could only be taken by the National Advisory Council, the interdepartmental body which determines American foreign lending policies.

Ambassador V. K. Wellington Koo spent an hour with the Secretary yesterday afternoon without, apparently, altering the decision to let the 500 million dollar credit lapse. The Ambassador said there had been a sympathetic discussion of China's short-term and long-term economic needs, but did not specifically mention the Export-Import Bank loan.

If any future help goes to China on a large scale, it probably will require a new appropriation from Congress, perhaps as part of a program for the economic rehabilitation of Asia.

Other Applications

Including the 500 million dollars earmarked for China, the Export-Import Bank had 785 million dollars of uncommitted funds at the start of this month. It is studying applications totaling about 400 million dollars from private and semi-private applicants as well as from governments, chiefly in Latin America and Europe.

Among the projects for which Export-Import Bank funds are being sought are:

A new highway in Bolivia, railroad equipment and industrial plants in Brazil, a rayon factory in Chile, the Assouan Dam improvement in Egypt, an airline in Siam, a railroad line in Saudi Arabia, and equipment for the Egyptian State Railways. In addition there are applications from the Austrian and Czechoslovak governments.

Acceptance Up to Assembly

President of Italy Resigns; May Be Reelected Today

Rome, June 255 (AP).—Enrico de Nicola handed in his resignation as Provisional President of the republic today, but most observers of Italian politics believed the Constituent Assembly would reelect him tomorrow.

The 69-year-old Neopolitan gave poor health as his reason shortly after six million workers had obeyed an order by the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor for a half-hour general strike in protest against attacks Sunday on six Communist headquarters in Sicily.

Premier Alcide de Gasperi, whose Communist-free cabinet has barely been confirmed in office, conferred with de Nicola this morning. Some press accounts said he had persuaded the elder statesman to stay in office if reelected.

But other accounts mentioned former Premiers Vittorio Orlando, Francesco Nitti and Ivanoe Bonomi among likely successors.

If a new president is chosen, leftists appeared determined to force de Gasperi to go through with the tradition of handing in his resignation. Thus a new crisis on formation of a government might develop, depending upon the views of the new president as to the wisdom of de Gasperi's attempt to govern with an all-Christian Democrat cabinet.

The strike went off quietly everywhere except in Milan, where a 13-year-old boy was roughly handled when he scattered leaflets saying, "Go back to work, fools. Yesterday you shouted viva Mussolini, today it's viva Togliatti."

Palmiro Togliatti is the Italian Communist leader.

New Tax Bill Would Pass, Byrd Asserts

Veto of Revised Measure Could Be Overriden, Virginia Senator Believes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The prospect of at least three Senate Democratic switches in favor of cutting taxes January 1 last night strongly tempted Republican leaders to take one more fling at tax reduction before adjournment.

No policy decisions were reached, but these developments caught the GOP high command by surprise and posed one of the session's strangest dilemmas:

1. Senator Harry Flood Byrd (D., Va.), who has previously voted against tax reduction predicted Congress could override any veto of the revised Knutson bill, starting 10½ to 30 per cent income tax cuts January 1. He said he did not believe the President would veto the revised bill.

Independent Canvass Underway

2. An independent canvass disclosed at least two other Democratic Senators previously opposed to overriding a tax veto would support January 1 tax cuts, even though vetoed. They were Senators Walter F. George (Ga.) and Edwin C. Johnson (Colo.).

3. One of the Senators making the canvass, who asked not to be identified, said this clinched 60 Senate votes for the new Knutson bill, against a possible 62 needed to override. He said he believed the continuing canvass would turn up more votes than needed.

The Republican leadership, badly burned when the initial tax cut collapsed with a veto and a sustaining House vote, was plainly reluctant to try again unless certain of the outcome.

Senate GOP Steersman Robert A. Taft (Ohio), suggested waiting until July 1 before reaching a decision. Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry Nebr.) referred all inquiries to Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.). Millikin told newsmen the entire situation will be canvassed. He stressed that no leadership decision has been reached. The Senate Republican steering committee meets tomorrow.

Across the Capitol, Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), said:

Costello Refuses To Give Testimony In Allis Inquiry

Emil Costello, CIO official in Wisconsin, refused to testify yesterday before the District grand jury investigating the Allis-Chalmers union case.

Costello was directed to appear this morning before Justice Edward M. Curran, of District Court. At that time, Justice Curran is to decide whether Costello, under the law, is compelled to testify. Should Costello not heed judicial instructions, he is liable to contempt of court action.

The grand jury probe is into congressional testimony of the UAW-CIO union at the Allis-Chalmers plant in West Allis, Wis. Two union officials, Harold Christoffel and Robert Buse, testified they had no Communist affiliations, during a House Labor Committee probe. The committee said it had evidence disproving Christoffel's and Buse's contentions.

Corn Price Again Soars To New High

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—The price of corn for delivery in July hit a new all-time high today because of devastating floods in the Nation's corn belt, predictions of more rain, and heavy Government purchases for export.

July corn closed at 2.02 to 2.02¼ a bushel, highest for a corn futures contract in the Chicago Board of Trade's 99-year history. It was the second straight day, and the third time in two weeks, that the previous high set in 1919 had been topped.

Reports from the corn belt, especially the "tall corn" State of Iowa, where rivers have been on a rampage for three weeks, were depressing. Thousands of acres of farmland have been flooded.

The sharp increase in prices on the exchange may be reflected on the retail level within a few months.

Experts said that the high corn prices may force housewives to pay more than usual for pork chops, since farmers will find it more profitable to sell their corn at the present boom prices, rather than use it to fatten hogs and then sell the hogs.

'No Chance' for Price Controls, Taft Says

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A farm leader warned yesterday that the meat shortage is so serious this country may "have to go back" to price control, but Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), GOP leader, promptly commented, "Not a chance."

Flood devastation in the corn belt is adding to the already threatening meat shortage, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, told the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report.

At best, O'Neal declared, the Nation may have to adopt "voluntary meat rationing."

"Eat Something Else"

Taft, chairman of the committee which has opened three-week hearings into price-stabilization and the United States' capacity to aid Europe, bluntly declared "there is no chance" of reimposition of price ceilings by the present Congress.

"We can control prices to some extent by controlling exports of corn and corn products," Taft told reporters. "And we can eat something else."

The Senate's Republican leader on domestic policies maintained that "the law of supply and demand will help keep a kind of ceiling on—if prices are too high, people will buy less."

Clark Begins Inquiry

Only a short time earlier the committee had heard the optimistic prediction of President Paul G. Hoffman of the Studebaker Corp. that a more effective economic machine can double the income of most Americans within 25 years. Hoffman was speaking for the Committee for Economic Development, a business research group.

Meanwhile at the Justice Department, Attorney General Tom Clark started an inquiry to see if some of the skyrocketing food prices are the result of violations of the antitrust laws.

Clark called a conference of the Department's antitrust division chiefs, from the field as well as from Washington, to study all legal

'Remedy for Communism'

Townsendites Convene, Ready To Give Congress New Nudge

Thousands of Townsend Plan disciples poured into the Capital yesterday to attend the seventh Townsend Plan national convention which opens today in Uline Arena.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, 80-year-old creator of the Townsend Plan, struck the keynote of the convention when he declared at a press conference that enactment of his bill would tend to wipe out communism in the United States.

"Communism arises from dissatisfaction with present-day conditions," he added.

Townsend Plan convention headquarters estimated 10,000 delegates would be on hand to urge Congress to pass the Townsend Plan bill, which is now before the House for the thirteenth successive year. The Washington Board of Trade, however, said that accommodations had been made only for from 5000 to 7000 Townsend rooters.

But whatever the total, they flocked into the Washington Hotel yesterday to register from every State, representing more than 12,000 Townsend clubs. Sporting Townsend Plan caps, badges, ribbons and even Indian chief hats, they arrived in Washington by plane, chartered bus, train and car.

Coal Stoppages Bring Threat to Strengthen New Labor Curb Law

To Take 2 Weeks or More

Truman Reported Hard Put To Fill 3 New Labor Board Jobs

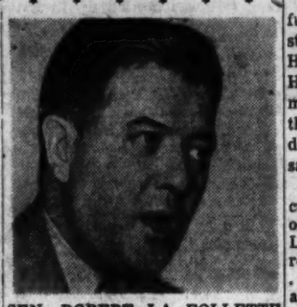
Hard pressed to find suitable—and willing—candidates, President Truman probably will not announce appointments of new members of the National Labor Relations Board and of its general counsel for at least two weeks, it was indicated on good authority yesterday.

Under the new Taft-Hartley Act, the present board must be expanded by two new members. Furthermore, a general counsel, with autonomous position and enormously important powers, must be named. All three are subject to Senate confirmation.

Gerhard P. Van Arkel, the former general counsel, has resigned because he felt the law was unworkable. He concluded it would not be fair to have anyone with that opinion attempt to administer the act.

The President's problem in finding a replacement for him and in appointing new members seemed to be that too many possible candidates hold critical views of the wisdom and practicality of the law.

Many men of national stature in the labor field, suitable either for board members or for general counsel, have publicly stated their extreme dislike and distrust of the new law. Included in this category are at least five former public members of the War Labor Board—Lloyd K. Garrison, Frank P. Graham, William H. Davis, Nathan Feinsinger and George W. Taylor.



SEN. ROBERT LA FOLLETTE
Would he accept?

Such a statement has also been made publicly by William M. Leiserson, former NLRB member.

Gerard V. Reilly, also a former board member and a principal technical assistant in drafting the new act, has indicated he would not be interested in serving as general counsel, although not, of

Lewis 'Mutinous,' Says Hartley as Mine Idleness Cuts Steel Production

The Nation's coal output was further cut yesterday by work stoppages protesting the new Taft-Hartley labor bill, and Chairman Hartley of the House Labor Committee replied with a threat that the law would be strengthened to deal with a coal strike if necessary.

As vital steel operations were curtailed because of the shortage of coal, Hartley attacked John L. Lewis, the miners' boss as "a rebellious and mutinous citizen . . . who has refused time and again to accept the authority of government except on his own terms."

Around half of the 400,000 soft coal miners were absent from work yesterday. In their protest against the new law, enacted over President Truman's veto, they were jumping the gun on their annual vacation period, due to start tomorrow.

Will They Return?

A much more serious question was whether they would remain on strike when their holiday is slated to end July 7.

In the Nation's second most menacing labor situation, the dispute between the CIO Shipyard Workers and the Bethlehem Steel Co., all hopes of forestalling a strike collapsed. Some 40,000 workers in nine East coast shipyards of the Bethlehem Co. were due to strike as of this morning. By July 1, another 100,000 workers of other companies are expected to join the stoppage.

Last-minute conferences yesterday afternoon in New York between union President John Green, and a company vice president, John Larkin, ended without agreement. Green said Larkin failed to offer "assurances of intelligent negotiations." The union is seeking a 13 cents an hour wage boost, six paid holidays and other concessions.

Hartley, in his blast at Lewis, said that because of the attitude he ascribed to the mine leader, "other leaders of organized labor are showing signs of the same rebellious activity."

"The reactions of organized labor to the enactment of the new labor law indicates a most unhealthy situation in our economy," he added.

Despite the spreading effects of the miners' stoppages, the Government showed no signs last night of taking remedial action. It was a serious question whether, indeed, any was available. And if there was, the complicated legal mes-

Angry Buckley Denies Trying To Avoid Stand

N. Y. Representative Says Loan to May Was an Accommodation

By The Associated Press

Representative Charles A. Buckley (D., N. Y.) showed up at the May-Garsson trial yesterday, shouted an angry denial that he had been avoiding an appearance, and then proceeded to dispute testimony of defense witnesses.

The Congressman from the New York Bronx told the trial jury that he lent $5000 in April, 1941, to Andrew J. May, wartime chairman of the House Military Committee, instead of to munitions maker Murray Garsson, as defense witnesses have testified.

The Government contends Garsson paid off the Buckley loan for May as part of more than $50,000 in alleged Garsson bribes to May, former Democratic House member from Kentucky.

Apology First Demanded

Murray and Henry Garsson, along with May, are charged together in the case with bribe conspiracy. The Government alleges that May was paid off for War Department favors he obtained for the 70-million-dollar Garsson munitions combine.

Prosecutor William A. Paisley, special assistant attorney general, had informed presiding Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut that the Justice Department had tried to find Buckley for a week here and in New York without success.

Representative Buckley suddenly appeared in the courtroom yesterday morning, and at first refused to take the oath as a witness until "I get an apology from Mr. Paisley."

"The impression has been created not only in my own city but all over the Nation that I was avoiding coming here," Buckley roared as he stood in the witness box.

"That is not true. I heard over the radio at my farm 28 miles from New York City last night that I was 'elusive' and immediately drove to the city and flew here."

Paisley told Justice Schweinhaut he had exhausted every effort to

House Passes Bill to Revise Promotions

Measure Now in Senate Would Reduce Number Of High Officers

Legislation revising the system of promoting Army and Navy officers and sharply cutting the number of top generals and admirals was passed by the House yesterday.

By voice vote, the measure was approved and sent to the Senate. It would substitute advancement by selection for the old method of seniority promotions in the Army.

Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.), sponsor of the bill, told the House it was aimed at forcing "deadwood and incompetent officers" from Army ranks. The measure also abolishes five-star Army and Navy rank and cuts down the number of four-star generals and admirals to a total of 11 for all services a year hence.

Only one amendment was added on the floor. It would continue the right of officers holding wartime commendations to be promoted when retiring, but abolish the practice in any future war.

The new system of Army promotions would require all first lieutenants, captains and majors to be recommended for advancement by a selection board before being promoted. Those found not qualified would be eliminated.

Lieutenant colonels would face more rigid selection for advancement.

Several changes would be made in the naval system of selective promotions. One would permit especially outstanding officers to be jumped over the heads of their contemporaries. Another permits former enlisted men to advance as high as commander without having to qualify for all line duties. The number of lieutenant commanders, commanders and captains would be increased.

Nimitz Urges U. S. to Assist Americas in Building Navies

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Fleet Admiral Nimitz urged yesterday that the United States help other American nations establish "modern navies" to aid in the defense of the Western Hemisphere.

He joined Secretary of the Navy Forrestal in a proposal to transfer United States warships and equipment to Latin-American states and Canada.

Forrestal disclosed that the Navy "has been holding in reserve" for this purpose "certain naval vessels which are in excess of our present defense requirements." He did not disclose the number, but responsible sources put the total at "close to a hundred," including a few cruisers.

The two Navy chiefs, with General Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee to back legislation authorizing a broad program of inter-American arms cooperation.

Under the plan, we would transfer arms munitions to Latin-American nations and Canada, train their military and naval men in using the weapons, and standardize military doctrines, tactics and techniques throughout the Americas.

The witnesses put the annual cost at under 20 million dollars. Eisenhower put the War Department's share at 10 million dollars and Nimitz "guessed" the net Navy

Taft Housing Bill May Be Modified

Senator Tells Rally He Hopes Some Sort Of Program Passes

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) told a "fight-for-housing" rally here yesterday he believes long-range housing legislation can be put through the Senate before Congress adjourns next month.

He said that when House and Senate leaders meet next week to lay out a program for the remainder of the session, he is "hopeful" of an agreement that will mean enactment of "some sort of a housing program."

He implied, however, that the program he is backing, embodied in the so-called Wagner-Ellender-Taft Bill, might have to be modified considerably to win House acceptance. A similar bill passed the Senate in the Seventy-ninth Congress, but was bottled up in the House.

Some 400 housing advocates from 23 States attended the rally in the Senate Office Building.

Both Taft and Senator Ellender (D., La.), another coauthor of the bill now pending before the Senate, told the crowd they knew of hardly any other legislation in recent years which had been so misrepresented.

"There are some extremely selfish people in this country—among them the real estate lobbyists," Ellender said. "They are for this bill only if you take away public housing. As far as I am concerned that is one of the essential elements of the bill."

The goal of the measure is construction of 15 million homes during the next 10 years at an estimated cost to the Government of $7,500,000,000. The plan calls among other things for the building of 500,000 dwelling units during the next four years under a public housing program subsidized by the Government.

Government-insured loans on homes costing up to $5000 would call for only a 5 per cent down payment, with the balance carried for 30 years at 4 per cent interest. The bill also provides for slum clearance and farm housing programs.

Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.), the third coauthor of the bill, was unable to be present on account of illness, but was represented by former Senator James Mead. Mead told the housing boosters that the nation should transfer the energy it used in making war munitions to the construction of needed housing.

"It is an investment that will pay the biggest possible dividends," Mead said.

Jasper McLevy, Socialist mayor of Bridgeport, Conn., asserted that "continued, callous and unforgivable neglect of the housing problem" was "inviting the spread" of Communism in the United States while "millions of American dollars" were being spent to halt it abroad.

"What a cruel hoax it will be on the American people to shut the door to Communists in Greece, while we open it to Communists in America through our criminal indifference to the housing situation here at home," McLevy said.

The Bridgeport mayor contended it was as "indisputable fact" that "even a small portion" of the money being used in foreign loans "could go far toward providing homes here for the families of men who fought hard to preserve our democracy."

Mayor C. Frank Whitehead of Jacksonville, Fla., urged immediate passage of the measure and said it was "Communistic" to oppose it.

Chairman R. J. Thomas of the CIO housing committee assailed Congress for inaction. He said that "alibis and technical explanations are no substitute for housing."

Guild Defeats Plan for Paid President

Sioux City, Ia., June 25 (AP).—The American Newspaper Guild (CIO) has settled one hot issue—the question of a full-time paid president—with delegates to the convention voting more than 2 to 1 to continue the presidency as an unpaid position.

The roll call came late last night after a debate in which 34 guildsmen made speeches. President Milton Murray announced the result of the vote was 242 13/14 to 91 1/14.

It was a defeat for Murray, who in a final plea had urged the convention not to force any man—whether himself or one of his opponents for the presidency—to carry on a regular newspaper job and be guild president at the same time.

"He will have to shirk one job or the other," said Murray.

Earlier a guest speaker, Nat R. Howard, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and editor of the Cleveland News, told the convention that guild units in labor disputes have too often carried on "a propaganda campaign intended to convince the public of the newspaper's lack of honor, decency and integrity." Howard said this is "sfear tactics."

Executive Vice President Sam Eubanks, asked by a reporter if he wished to comment on Howard's speech, said "the reaction among the de egates was generally bad."

Eubank added:

"I regret that the remarks of the president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors so closely reflect the standard criticism of the guild made by the owners of newspapers. We believe those criticisms are unfounded and misrepresent the facts."

GOP to Press for Rise In Minimum Wage

Republican leaders in the House and Senate were reported yesterday to be ready to press for prompt approval of legislation raising the minimum wage from its present level of 40 cents an hour to 60 or 65 cents.

The House Labor Committee will open tomorrow approximately two weeks of public hearings on a bill to make the figure 60 cents. Officials of the Senate Labor Committee said that if the House approves the legislation, the Senate Committee probably will hurry it to the Senate floor without the formality of hearings.

Truman Reported Hard Put To Fill 3 New Labor Board Jobs

course, for the same reason as the act's opponents.

The present members of the board discussed the problem on Tuesday with President Truman. Among possible appointees mentioned at the meeting, it was learned, were former Senator Robert LaFollette, and Joseph Miller, recently special labor relations assistant to White House Advisor John R. Steelman.

LaFollette, it was believed, would be an acceptable appointment to all but the extreme right and extreme left wings in the country. He was head of the famed LaFollette committee which investigated abuses against labor in the '30s. The biggest question about LaFollette is whether he would accept the position.

In this field, the President's choice is limited. On the one hand, he can scarcely appoint a person who has publicly criticized the act. On the other hand, most public figures who favored it and who are experienced in labor matters—Donald J. Richberg and Leo Wolman are examples—are distrusted by labor for that or other reasons. And if the law is to have a chance of success, its administration must enjoy some degree of confidence from labor groups.

Warren May Be Dropped

Another appointment which the President must make is that of director of the new Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. It becomes operative in 60 days, taking over the functions of the Labor Department Conciliation Service.

The head of the latter organization, Edgar L. Warren, probably will not be appointed to the new job, it was reported yesterday. Although he is held in high esteem in Administration circles and would be the President's logical choice, he has been the subject of a bitter personal attack by Representative Keefe (R., Wis.), chairman of the House Labor Appropriations Subcommittee.

Mr. Keefe charged Warren with Communist party line sympathies. Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), chairman of the equivalent subcommittee in the Senate, has made a persistent fight for Warren and has denounced Mr. Keefe's charges as unfounded.

Nevertheless, it is believed that the whole fight would flare anew and unpleasantly if Warren's name were sent to the Senate for confirmation in the new job.

Miller, besides being mentioned as an NLRB member, was also discussed at the White House for the conciliation post, it was learned. Before working with Steelman, he mer Vice Admiral Ben Moreell had been labor consultant to forwhen Moreell was head of the Seabees and when he operated the oil and coal industries under Govern emnt seizure.

To Test Politics Ban

New York, June 25 (U.P.).—The ban of the Taft-Hartley law on union political activity will be tested in the July 1 issue of Advance, official publication of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, which will attack those who voted for the law, the union said tonight.

The clothing workers' union made public in the text of an editorial to be published in that issue with a statement from President Jacob S. Potofsky which said he was convinced the labor press provision of the law will not "stand up before the Supreme Court."

Ultimatum Rejected

St. Louis, June 25 (AP).—The executive board of the Streetcar and Bus Operators' Union rejected today an ultimatum from Mayor Aloys P. Kaufman to accept a strike-settlement plan following acceptance of the plan by the Public Service Co.

D. C. Jobless Expected to Pass 30,000

The District's number of unemployed is expected to exceed 30,000 by next week, the local United States Employment Service office reported yesterday.

Jobless rolls were less than 20,000 during the last week of May, but have been steadily rising, according to USES, due to Government personnel cuts and summer job-hunting by students and teachers. Employment reached the highest level here during the last week in May.

The labor demand in July will be negligible in both Government and private industry, the USES added. Most job opportunities will represent vacancies created by normal turnover. However, demand for workers in short supply—such as auto mechanics, bricklayers, carpenters, plumbers, typists and stenographers—will continue through the summer.

Leading District employers indicate they are generally fully staffed, and expect no substantial changes in their employment totals over the next five months, USES said.

USES noted that 250 disabled veterans are still seeking work here adding, "In a market where job opportunities are on the decrease their plight is a community responsibility."

Hartley Hints Stronger Law

sures which might be attempted were considered scarcely worth the effort since the miners will be on a duly authorized holiday tomorrow anyway.

Since Lewis has made no overt announcement, either calling or condoning the strikes, it was difficult to see how the walkouts violated a Federal Court injunction forbidding the calling of a strike as long as the mines remain in Federal possession.

Representative Howard Smith (D., Va.) has introduced a bill which would continue the period of Government operation of the mines; due to revert to their private owners next Tuesday. But Congressional leaders gave it no chance for passage at this session.

Hartley himself rejected the Smith proposal, saying it would just be another in a long series of surrenders to Lewis.

Meantime, leading spokesmen and negotiators for the Northern and Western coal operators gathered in Washington yesterday. They asserted that they had no plans for getting in touch with Lewis to resume negotiations, previously broken off, to achieve a new contract by June 7. They also declared they had not appealed to the CMA for Federal help.

But it was obvious that their gathering was not coincidental. It was assumed, therefore, that some steps were 1 nthe making to restore contract negotiations with Lewis.

Lewis, meantime, kept silent, on both the Hartley attack and the gathering of the operators.

In the coal labor situation, the strikes spread yesterday as far west as Utah, where seven mines were shut down. Hitherto, the walkouts had been confined to the East and Midwest area.

Reports on the number of miners idle were conflicting. In Washington, the Coal Mines Administration reported in a "conservative and incomplete" estimate that about 192,000 diggers were out. From Pittsburgh, the Associated Press gave the figure as 217,000. The National Coal Association estimated 250,000, or five-eighths of the total of 400,000 miners, were on strike.

Hardest hit field was the high volatile area—southern West Virginia, eastern Kentucky and part of Virginia. Of about 800 mines, 438 were not working. More than half of the mines were also idle in western Pennsylvania and the walkouts had even spread to the anthracite areas.

Steel cutbacks which were announced yesterday amounted to the equivalent of 10½ blast furnaces being banked. Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. shut off six blast furnaces at Youngstown and Chicago, and Carnegie-Innilois, a United States Steel subsidiary, closed the equivalent of 4½ furnaces in its Pittsburgh area plants.

Progress at Celanese

Federal conciliators reported "some progress" yesterday in efforts to end a 25-day strike of 6000 CIO textile workers at the Celanese Corp. of America plant in Cumberland, Md.

The progress was reported for the first time in three days of Government efforts here to break the deadlock over premium pay for weekend work, paid vacations and lunch periods and other so-called "fringe" contract adjustments.

James A. Holden, conciliator, said the conferences were recessed late in the day until 10:30 a. m. (Eastern daylight time) today.

New Flood Crests Move on Missouri

.3 of 1 Per Cent

Living Cost Index Shows Slight Drop

Prices of all living essentials except rent declined three tenths of 1 per cent between mid-April and Mid-May for the first drop since June, 1942, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said yesterday.

Food prices were off two tenths of 1 per cent and rents rose the same figure.

The bureau fixed the consumer's price index at 155.8 on May 15, compared with a peak of 156.3 in mid-March. The BLS considers the period from 1935 to 1939 as normal, or 100.

The bureau said that on May 15 workers' families in large cities were paying over 100 per cent more for food than in August, 1939, 84 per cent more for clothing and 81 per cent more for house furnishings.

Residential rents were estimated at 109.2 compared with 1935-39.

Concern over the situation was expressed on Capitol Hill by Representatives Douglas (D., Calif.) and McCormack (D., Mass.), who called on Congress to provide "relief from high and rising prices."

They didn't list any specific steps to be taken. But they said in a joint statement there should be a bipartisan effort to meet the problem and that "the Democrats are willing to cooperate."

The responsibility for starting action, they said, is on the Republicans.

Record Levels Are Reached by 'Big Muddy' Waters

Omaha, June 25 (AP).—Surging Missouri River flood waters were setting a new high level with every measurement tonight. The record crest on Big Muddy headed downstream to Missouri where many dikes already have been torn by previous high water.

At Rulo in southeast Nebraska the Missouri reached 21.11 feet at 5 p. m., a new record, and .09 of a foot over the previous record—21.02 feet at 8 a.m. today.

The water overspread farmland as far as the eye could see from Rulo.

As the crest rushed downstream, Iowa and Nebraska still had floods on tributaries to deal with, and both States were faced with a mounting toll of crop and property loss.

In Iowa, the Red Cross prepared shelter for 350 to 400 families at Des Moines as the Iowa capital prepared for the highest water since 1903, expected tomorrow morning. Two hundred persons were evacuated from their homes near the Raccoon River in the town of West Des Moines.

Nebraska's floods were narrowed down to the Platte and Elkhorn Rivers. Nearing the mouth of the Platte was a flood crest which broke two dikes near Ashland, Nebr., and inundated thousands of acres not flooded since 1941. Downstream the river was rising at Cedar Creek and Plattsmouth, Nebr. The Elkhorn, in northeast Nebraska, was carrying two crests today, one of which flooded lowlands near Norfolk. The other engulfed golf courses and parks and spread over farmland near Beemer and West Point, Nebr., downstream.

The stamps, depicting scenes from General Roosevelt's career, are being used by a committee which is conducting a campaign for $150,000 to build a free library at Oyster Bay in honor of the general. Britain Turns To Africa for New Strength

London, June 25 (U.P.).—Britain today announced a huge colonial expansion program in which 400 million dollars will be spent on industry and agriculture to build a strong, new empire, centering around Africa.

The announcement, made in Commons by Colonial Secretary Arthur Creech Jones, revealed that Britain had turned to its colonies, chiefly Africa, as a source of power and wealth to bolster its own creaking economy and compensate for its weakening position in India, Egypt and the Middle East.

It tied in with Britain's efforts to develop Africa as the empire's main overseas military base, concentrating there ships and troops formerly scattered through Egypt, India and other intermediary bases.

Creech Jones said the government proposed to set up a colonial development corporation with total borrowing power of 400 million dollars to operate on commercial principles.

Creech Jones added that proposed legislation also will provide for establishment of a separate corporation to take over a peanut-growing project already begun in East Africa by the Food Ministry.

Well-informed sources believed the new corporations will sponsor projects to grow wheat and corn and probably raise cattle on the great undeveloped lands of British Africa.

2 German War Trial Jurists Are Appointed

President Truman yesterday designed Associate Justice Edward Francis Carter of the Nebraska Supreme Court and former Judge Curtis Grover Shake of the Supreme Court of Indiana to serve on military tribunals in Germany.

Under the designation, they may serve on any of the several military tribunals set up for the trial of major war criminals in the United States occupation zone.

Mexico Suspends Gold Coin Sales On Fund's Request

Mexico City, June 25 (AP).—Mexico, member of the International Monetary Fund, promptly suspended gold coin sales yesterday when the fund officials asked such action to halt gold and money speculation, especially in Asia.

The Bank of Mexico continued shipments of gold to the Portuguese and Argentine governments.

The Bank of Mexico has made a large profit on gold coin sales the past year, facilitating such sales as part of the bank's plan to stop speculators from smuggling gold out of the country.

The bank sold 50-peso coins for the equivalent of United States $47.57 or about $39.53 a Troy ounce as compared with United States price of $35 an ounce.

'Not a Chance,' Says Taft On Return of Price Controls grounds for action in suspected illegal price increases.

It was Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) who first raised the issue of possible need for price controls on meat.

$2 Corn Noted

Noting that floods are seriously damaging the corn crop, O'Mahoney referred to reports of $2 corn, and said,

"If corn is high and we don't have enough to feed our cattle, we're likely to develop a shortage of meat, followed by price increases, followed by another round of wage increases and a crippling of our effort to contribute to the rehabilitation of Europe. What's the remedy—price control?"

"We may have to go back to it," replied O'Neal. "Maybe we'll just have to eat not so much meat."

Program Outlined

The CED spokesman outlined a broad program which he said would help curb the historical tendency of the "dynamic economy" of the United States toward "booms and busts."

The notion that "booms and busts" are inevitable should be "utterly rejected," he said.

Hoffman indorsed the overseas rehabilitation suggestions of former President Hoover and Secretary of State George C. Marshall, at the same time warning that the economy of this Nation must be kept in a healthy state if we are to help anyone at all.

"If we do nothing and wait for the world to fall to pieces," Hoffman declared, "Russia will be there to pick up the pieces."

'Slogan' Approach Hit

He added that "We must give up trying to use slogans, cliches, and views based on prejudice as answers to tough economic questions. We can largely realize the age-old dream of abolishing poverty."

Hoffman declared that Government should stop monopolistic practices in business; break down barriers to small business enterprise, and cut taxes substantially in the near future.

He said the small amount of money spent in this country on economic research is "a national disgrace."

In response to a question from Taft, Hoffman said he favored the retention of credit controls.

"Credit," Hoffman said, "is a great inflationary force."

He added that he was nearly alone in the automobile industry in favoring such controls.

Japanese Whaling Expedition Bears Official Approval

By the United Press

Secretary of State George C. Marshall made it clear yesterday that Gen. Douglas MacArthur's decision to permit a Japanese whaling expedition to enter Antarctic waters this summer bore the full approval of the State Department.

He told a news conference that the expedition will sail despite protests of Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Norway. The four countries hold that Japanese whaling practices are inefficient, the supply of whales is diminishing rapidly, and such an expedition might provide the nucleus of a future Japanese navy.

Marshall emphasized that failure to permit dispatch of the expedition would mean a continuing heavy burden on American taxpayers who are making up the food deficits for Japan.

Rules Committee Approves Single-Appropriation Measure

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday unanimously approved a resolution by Senator Harry Flood Byrd (D., Va.) for a single, omnibus appropriation bill beginning next January 1.

Consolidating the 12 separate departmental appropriation bills into one understandable measure, with itemized estimates by House-Senate committees covering all projected spending, the resolution is slated for Senate action this session.

Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) joined Byrd in sponsoring the measure. It has not yet been introduced in the House.

Byrd told newsmen the resolution was designed "to make legislative budget machinery work." He said the single big annual money bill would give Congress and the country a clear picture at all stages of the Nation's budgetary status, in contrast to the present confusing spectacle of twelve separate bills moving through Congress over a period of six months.

Log-Jam Ahead

Byrd's resolution was reported headed into one of the worst log-jams on appropriations in years. With the new fiscal year only five days off, not one of the regular departmental appropriations has yet reached the White House. Leaders were considering a special "continuing resolution," reinforcing blanket authority for the departments to carry on, recently tied to a deficiency bill.

The resolution is in the form of an amendment to the legislative reorganization act, which authorized the now conference-bogged legislative budget.

Byrd said it would not disturb the present subcommittee organization of the appropriation committees, since the consolidated bill would be divided into titles generally corresponding to existing subcommittee jurisdictions.

He said his proposal didn't rule out separate deficiency or supplemental appropriations, but would reduce the number of these.

Soviet Breaks Dairen Pact, Chinese Charge

Nanking, June 25 (AP).—China issued a white paper today accusing Russia of failing to live up to her treaty and of blocking Chinese entry into Dairen and Port Arthur ever since Japan's surrender.

The paper called Moscow's "serious attention" to the asserted failure to abide by the treaty and declared "the Chinese Government is free at any time" to decide to send troops to both Soviet-occupied Manchurian ports.

On the fighting front, a Government spokesman predicted a two-week Communist siege of Szepkingnai would be broken shortly by relief columns which he said were nearing the Manchurian railway city.

High Kuomintang officials in Peiping said Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was due there momentarily to tell his generals "how to face the present situation in North China."

Chinese Reds Aided

The foreign office review of relations with Russia declared that Soviet obstruction had permitted the Communists to infiltrate the region around Dairen and Porth Arthur and throw up a barrier to Government forces.

It said that China prepared to send in troops immediately after Japan's surrender, but Russia strongly opposed the move "on the ground Dairen was to be made a free port."

The treaty with Russia making Dairen a free port had no bearing on the stationing of Chinese troops there, the white paper continued, but Soviet objections stood and China was unable to take over.

Then, the foreign office said, Chinese Communists without interference from the Russians rapidly built up armed forces near both ports "constituting a strong impediment to taking over this area by land."

Russians Block Troops

Subsequently the Russians refused to allow Chinese troops to enter because "the state of war with Japan has not ended, therefore, Dairen, as well as Port Arthur, are subject to military supervision established in the Port Arthur (Russian) naval base," the paper added.

China's position was that, under the treaty Port Arthur was set aside for "the joint use of the two countries" and that the Chinese Government was entitled to send troops to the city.

(The Government has accused Russia of giving military aid in Manchuria to the Communists.)

Contempt Case Of Dennis Goes To Jury Today

The case of Eugene Dennis, Communist Party secretary, accused of contempt of Congress will go to the jury today following final arguments by opposing counsel.

Only one witness—Representative Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), was called by the defense yesterday before Attorney Louis McCabe, representing Dennis, rested his case.

Marcantonio testified that Representative Karl Mundt (R., S. Dak.), in asking the House to cite Dennis for contempt had read only one paragraph of Dennis' 11-page statement. This, he said, was the bare statement that Dennis was not going to appear before the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Are You Not Champion?

"Are you not the champion of the Communist Party in Congress?" Prosecutor John W. Fihelly asked.

The witness answered, "I am the champion of the rights of labor, of democracy and the Negro. I am against Ku Klux Klanism and native fascism. I have fought for the constitutional rights of the Communist Party."

McCabe sought to question Marcantonio as to the opinions of Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), and whether the House committee had investigated Paul Robeson and the Southern Conference on Human Welfare. Associate Justice David A. Pine ruled that such questions were irrelevant and the answers inadmissible.

Rankin Klan Opinion Ruled Out in Trial

Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Proffered testimony that Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) had defended the Ku Klux Klan yesterday was ruled inadmissible in the contempt of Congress trial of 16 members of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee.

The anti-Fascist group is charged with contempt and conspiracy to commit contempt, both charges stemming from failure of defendants to produce records subpenaed by the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Columnist Drew Pearson, appearing as a defense witness, was not allowed to testify regarding the Rankin allegations.

But his charges, which he told reporters came from a House committee report, were read into the record at a bench conference.

Pearson's testimony was to the effect that during deliberations of the House committee in June, 1948, as to whether to investigate the Ku Klux Klan, Rankin said: "The Klan is an American institution. Its members are Americans. The function of this committee is to investigate foreign 'isms.'"

Also barred as evidence was a letter sent Pearson by Ernest Adamson, then general counsel of the House committee.

This letter, Pearson said, "objected" to the use of the phrase, "make democracy live" in his radio program, because, according to the Constitution, the United States is a republic.

Earlier, Associate Justice Richmond B. Keech denied "for the time being" a motion offered by Defense Attorney O. John Rogge for a directed acquittal on both counts. The judge stated he would rule on this later as a matter of expediency.

A parade of character witnesses led by Actor Fredric March, his wife, Florence Eldridge, and Henry Grattan Doyle, dean of Columbia College, George Washington University, testified on behalf of the defendants.

Setback Dealt Soviet Stand On U. N. 'Army' Contributions

Lake Success, June 25 (AP).—The United States today led a Security Council majority in an attack on Russia's demand that the five big powers contribute identical land, sea and air units to a global police force.

United States Representative Herschel V. Johnson charged that the "principle of equality" advocated by Russia would cripple the security force by limiting the contributions of each Nation to whatever the weakest was capable of contributing.

An alternate plan put forward in the report of the United Nations Military Staff Committee had the support of the United States, Britain, France and China—the other four Nations represented on the military committee. It provides that contributions should be made on a "comparable" basis, but that the type of units furnished should depend upon the capabilities of each country.

The majority plan was reported to have almost unanimous support in the 11-Nation Security Council. A small-power move to line up behind it was started by Australia and Syria, both of which declared they could not accept the Soviet plan.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko stood firmly behind the Russian demand despite the strong opposition. He was armed with the big power veto which he could use if necessary to block approval by the majority.

Johnson said he was both surprised and puzzled by Gromyko's statement which he said seemed to infer that all the members of the military committee except the Soviet member had "some sinister motive" in supporting the idea of comparable contributions.

House Passes Bill To Continue Ship Operation by U. S.

The House passed and sent to the Senate today a bill to continue until next March 1 the Maritime Commission's authority to operate ships.

Some of its power ends July 1 and some December 31 unless Congress extends it.

Secretary of State Marshall backed the extension, saying the Maritime Commission must keep ships running to get vital food and oil to Europe.

Marshall Says U. S. Is Still Firmly Opposed To International Operation of Ruhr Mines

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Secretary Marshall contributed to the European reconstruction discussions yesterday by announcing that the United States still firmly opposed any international operation of the coal mines of the Ruhr.

Marshall

The Secretary's statement, made at his news conference, bore directly upon tomorrow's discussions in Paris between the British, French and Soviet Foreign Ministers. It indicated that the United States would not approve a European recovery plan which put the Ruhr mines under an international authority, such as that proposed by President John J. McCloy of the World Bank.

The Secretary said there had been no change in the American policy outlined at the recent Moscow conference, where he advocated international allocation of Ruhr coal but actual operation of the mines in the hands of the Germans.

Three Other Developments

There were three other developments in this country yesterday in the aftermath of Secretary Marshall's now-famous speech at Harvard on June 5:

1. Treasury Secretary Snyder said he did not view the Marshall speech as an invitation to Europe to write a blank check which the United States would pay. Its chief purpose, he told his news conference, was to get the European countries to draw up a common reconstruction program for themselves.

2. United Nations' officials at Lake Success, N. Y., planned to welcome Secretary Marshall today on a visit to the Charter Day ceremonies. The Secretary is expected to assure Secretary-General Trygve Lie that the United States intends to cooperate to the greatest possible extent with the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe.

3. Henry A. Wallace, writing in the current issue of the New Republic, said the Marshall proposals for European recovery were a great advance over the Truman Doctrine. The former Vice President said his chief question about the program was whether Congress would appropriate the necessary "billions" with out conditions that the money be spent for "fiercely anti-Communist or anti-Socialist objectives."

Secretary Marshall told his news conference he did not intend to send Undersecretary Will Clayton or anyone else as an observer to represent the United States at the Foreign Ministers' meeting in Paris.

He agreed with reports from Europe that recovery in the Ruhr would be an essential part of the coming European reconstruction program. He said coal was the great and fundamental necessity in European rehabilitation, but declined to say how he thought coal production could be increased in the Ruhr or elsewhere.

Answering questions about the McCloy proposal for an international coal authority in the Ruhr, the secretary recalled his stand at Moscow—that the operation of Ruhr mines should be in the hands of the Germans who understood coal production, although its allocation should be under international direction. There has been no change in this position, he said.

Of course, he added, an increase in German production was essential to any reconstruction program in Europe. He suggested that a deal could be done to revive Ruhr production without involving dollar expenditures. The most important item in Ruhr revival is not money, he said, but administrative and management arrangements to get more coal out of the ground.

In this the secretary was known to be following the thesis of Lieut. Gen. Lucius D. Clay, the American commander in Germany, that neither dollars nor foreign technicians are the chief need in the Ruhr. Clay is said to feel that the Ruhr problem is benig solved satisfactorily by the British and American administrators, although test reports show Ruhr production far below its goals at under 220,000 tons a day.

It is also known that the British and American authorities in Germany are working hard to resolve some of their past disagreements over coal production. Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas has been in Germany recently as nonmilitary intermediary between the two governments.

Italy to Welcome Eva Peron Today In Grand Fashion

Rome, June 25.—Eva Peron, the 27-year-old wife of Argentina's dictatorial president, will arrive here from Spain tomorrow for the most lavish reception Italy has accorded anyone since the war.

The visit of the former motion picture actress will be both an opportunity and an embarrassment to Italy. It will be an opportunity to court greater friendship from Argentina, the country to which over-populated Italy would like to send many thousands of immigrants. It will be an embarrassment on the other hand, at a moment when Italy is seeking admission to the United Nations as a completely reformed anti-Fascist nation. Ties with Argentina were one of the bases of prewar Axis policy.

Italy will give Madame Peron "something between an official and a nonofficial reception," the Italian foreign office said today. It will outdo anything any other postwar Italian visitor has seen but it will fall considerably short of the tummultuous welcome which has just been given to her by Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Spain.

$102,000 Gems Stolen On Train, Salesman Says

Detroit, June 25 (AP).—Arthur Tuthill, 58, a New York City jewelry salesman, reported to police today that his bag containing $102,000 worth of diamonds and other valuable stones was apparently stolen while he boarded a Detroit to Toledo train.

Officers said he told of surrendering the bag to a railroad porter but said when he later took his seat it was not there. Although the porter was questioned, police said Tuthill told them he saw the man leave the train without the bag.

Report Backs Greece's Charge on Guerilla Aid

Lake Success, N. Y., June 25 (INS).—The United Nations Balkans investigating commission submitted to the Security Council today a report expressing the conclusion that Yugoslavia, and to a lesser degree, Albania and Bulgaria, have supported guerilla warfare in Greece.

The Balkans report, comprising three thick volumes, revealed an eight-to-two line-up in favor of its conclusions, with one nation—France—abstaining.

The United States, the United Kingdom, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, China, Colombia and Syria approved the report's conclusions.

Border Commission Asked

The commission recommended that the Security Council establish for two years a border commission for the purpose of restoring normal conditions along the frontiers between Greece on the one hand and Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia on the other.

The French delegation held that it was a question whether the commission had the power to pronounce a judgment on the findings.

The Belgian and Colombian delegations, while subscribing to the conclusions, submitted a statement saying they considered it is not the commission's duty "to give any decision as to the possible responsibility of the Albanian, Bulgarian and Yugoslav governments."

The report said Yugoslavian aid guerillas took the form of "training refugees from Greece within the borders of Yugoslavia, recruiting and dispatching them to Greece for action with the guerillas' units there, as well as supplying them with arms, supplies, transport, guides, hospitalization, etc., and providing an avenue of escape for guerillas fleeing from Greek government forces."

Evidence was given to the effect that Yugoslav guards permitted guerillas to escape into Yugoslavia when pursued.

In the case of Albania, according to the report, evidence indicated that at Rubig, a village about 50 miles north of Tirana, a camp for Greek refugees had been in existence from the spring of 1945 to October, 1945.

Evidence submitted to the commission indicated, the report said, that Greek guerillas were assisted in crossing Bulgarian territory from Yugoslavia to Greece.

To Ask Bulgarian Cooperation

Lake Success, June 25 (AP).—The United Nations Balkan Investigating Commission today overrode Russian objections and adopted a United States proposal directing its subcommission in Greece to complete its investigation of incidents on the Bulgarian frontier.

Serve to Expose Shams

2. They keep the record clear, and carry out what Undersecretary Dean Acheson recently described as one of the aims of American policy—to "expose for all to see the shams and frauds behind which peoples are deprived of their liberty by little groups supported by foreign power."

Apart from these, there is one other reason why the United States feels directly concerned by violations of civil liberties in the Balkans.

Article 3 of the new peace treaty with Romania, ratified by the Senate but not yet brought into force, guarantees civil rights and freedoms to the people of Romania. The note just sent to Bucharest recalls these guarantees, and warns against their violation.

Text of Note

Following is the text of the note as it will be delivered to Romanian Foreign Minister Ghoerghe Tatarescu:

"I have been instructed to convey to you my Government's serious concern over the drastic deprivation of civil liberties to which the Romanian people are being subjected, by or with the acquiescence of the Romanian authorities, in particular the arbitrary arrest without warrant or charge of hundreds of Opposition Party and nonparty persons and the indefinite detention of such individuals in prison and concentration camps under reportedly deplorable conditions.

"While the communique of May 6, 1947, issued by the Romanian Minister of Interior suggests that the Romanian government proposes to justify these measures as necessary to the preservation of internal order in the face of provocative or subversive activities, they seem rather to represent a deliberate effort at the suppression or terroristic intimidation of democratic elements of the Romanian population who oppose the present regime.

"My Government is following closely these developments which appear to contravene formal and informal assurances given by officials of the Romanian government on several occasions to representatives of the United States with reference to specific public liberties as well as professions of the Romanian government's adherence to principles of freedom and justice.

"Moreover, such evident deprivation of the most elemental human rights and fundamental freedoms is in conflict with Article 3 of the Peace Treaty which the Romanian government has signed and whose terms will obligate the Romanian government to secure to all persons under Romanian jurisdiction the enjoyment of such rights and freedoms. My Government in deeply concerned that the fulfillment of these treaty provisions not be prejudiced by actions anticipating the coming-into-force of treaty which effectively nullify the Romanian government's undertakings with respect thereto.

"My Government considers that the obligations of Article 3 of the Peace Treaty are unequivocal and that the rights therein assured to the Romanian people cannot be denied or modified by domestic legislation or judicial process."

A-Plants Likely To Go First Where There's No Power

By the United Press

The first commercial installations for atomic power probably will be in areas without access to coal and water power, according to the Federal Atomic Energy Commission.

The commission's views were expressed in a letter from Chairman David E. Lilienthal to Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.). The Congressman sought an opinion on a claim that further dam building would be useless because atomic energy would replace electric power within 10 years.

"We believe," said the letter, "that the process will in general be one of gradually supplementing, rather than replacing, other means of generating electrical power. It is very likely that the first commercial installations for atomic power will be in locations with inadequate access to coal and economical water power."

Woman Cuts Boy's Tongue to Compel Him to 'Tell Truth'

Falconer, N. Y., June 25 (U.P.).—Mrs. Agnes Smith of nearby Ross Mills admitted today cutting the tongue of a 7-year-old boarder with a knife in order to force him to "tell the truth," police said.

The 47-year-old woman confessed grasping the tongue of Richard Griffin with a pair of pliers and cutting a half-inch tear in the lining beneath his tongue.

Mrs. Smith's son was accused of the theft of some pencils taken from the Ross Mills school yesterday. The Griffin boy said Mrs. Smith then forced him to admit the theft.

Eight Congressmen Urge Approval of DP Entry

By The Associated Press

Eight House members—four Republicans and four Democrats—yesterday urged approval of legislation to permit entry into the United States of 400,000 displaced persons from Europe over a four-year period.

Appearing before a House Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration in behalf of legislation proposed by Representative Stratton (R., Ill.) were:

Representatives Javits (R., N. Y.), Davis (R., Wis.), Foote (R., Conn.), Mitchell Jenkins (R., Pa.), Madden (D., Ind.), Klein, (D., N. Y.), Sabath (D., Ill.), and Lesinski (D., Mich.).

On the other hand, Merwin K. Hart, president of the National Economic Council, told the committe: "I oppose the Stratton bill and all other bills designed to let down the bars and permit increased immigration."

Cries Thwart Jerusalem Kidnapers

Tel Aviv, June 25 (AP).—Alan Major, Palestine government liaison officer with the United Nations Special Commission on Palestine, was saved from terrorist kidnaping in Jerusalem today by the screams of his half-Jewish daughter.

Major left the security zone to attend a birthday party for his daughter, Judith, at their home, 300 yards outside the zone, where she and Major's Jewish wife live.

As he entered the doorway, three assailants blackjacked him and tried to chloroform him. His daughter screamed for help from a balcony.

A passing British army car stopped and the attackers fled.

Present to Pursue Inquiry

Chairman Emil Sandstroem and other members of the U. N. Commission were in this all-Jewish city today to pursue their investigation of Palestine conditions.

Half a dozen masked Jews, apparently teen-agers led by a girl of about 16, strung banners of the Irgun Leumi underground organization in front of their hotel.

Three British policemen stood idly by. Robert Hickox, American news reel cameraman, was manhandled when he tried to film the scene. Police burned the flags.

Sandstroem arrived here secretly, in advance of other delegates.

Usually reliable sources said that last night Sandstroem was escorted by two Irgunists to talk to Menahem Beigin, leader of the organization. This afternoon the U. N. commission denied officially any such interview had been held. But Irgun spokesman boasted: "We have met 'Unscop'."

Neither Jew Nor Arab

Jerusalem, June 25 (AP)—A Palestine government report today to the United Nations Commission said British administration was based on the principle that the Holy Land should "neither be a Jew state nor an Arab state but one in which the two peoples in Palestine should share authority in the government in such a way that the essential interests of each are secured."

It declared, however, that "both communities wish to have self-government in Palestine; each wished to be the governing element; and neither wishes to be governed by the other."

Man Confesses Slaying in Street Row Over Women

A 30-year-old truck driver yesterday gave himself up in the early-morning slaying of James Curtis Smith, 38, of 1536 Columbia st. nw.

Nervously puffing a cigarette, David Darden of 119 P st. nw., walked into Third Precinct Station about 9:40 a. m. and said, "I have shot a man. I want to give myself up." Police quoted him as saying the shooting occurred in a sidewalk argument "over women."

Smith died at Gallinger Hospital at 1:25 a. m.

Darden is being held at the Second Precinct Station awaiting action of a coroner's jury at 11 a. m. today.

Friends Pay

Cashier's Shortage Made Good

Napoleon, Ind., June 25 (U.P.)—Friends today made good the shortage of a small town bank cashier who took $43,394 of the bank's funds and then received a "vote of confidence" from his employers. But he still must face embezzlement charges.

McClanahan.

He is Robert M. McClanahan, 33. He surrendered at Indianapolis yesterday.

Erwin Fruchtnicht, a bank director, said he and other directors did not believe McClanahan had done anything wrong and they would defend him. They said he had intended all along to pay back the money.

"He was buying some equipment for a business he operated and he intended to reimburse the bank in a few days," Fruchtnicht said.

He declined to say who had made the shortage good.

Window Cleaners Will Get Hearing

Washington window cleaners whose lives may or may not be hanging in precarious balance will be given a chance to air their complaints tomorrow night.

The occasion is a scheduled hearing by the Industrial Safety Division, Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board, of the District of Columbia. The public hearing is set for 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Municipal Center Building, 300 Indiana ave. nw. Interested parties are invited to testify.

Panamanian Asks That U. S. Give Up Bases

Geneva, Switzerland, June 25 (U.P.)—Nemesi Manuel Lopez Zapata, Panama delegate to the International Labor Conference, today demanded that the United States return military bases to Panama and "respect my country's sovereignty."

Zapata also demanded that the American Federation of Labor cease "spreading dissension" in Latin America. He asked the conference to send a commission to the Canal Zone to investigate "Fascist-type racial discrimination" against Negro workers.

Chile's President on Tour

Santiago, Chile, June 25 (AP).—President Gabriel Gonzalez Videla left Santiago by plane today on an 18-day official visit to Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina to promote trade.

Associates indicated he also would talk about hemisphere policy on the international defense plan, without entering into a bloc. It seemed unlikely that his discussions would include communism, for the President is an avowed Leftist and opposes what he calls "persecution of ideologies."

Low Flying Grounds Pilot

A student flier who flew so low two policemen could read his plane identification was grounded for six months by the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday.

George Chaconas, 27, of 5101 13th st. nw., was flying at 400 feet over Georgia ave. and Gallatin st. nw. last November, the policemen testified. Regulations call for an altitude of at least 1000 feet over a populated area. The policemen, Albert K. Bershak and Morris Fishman, reported the plane to the CAB.

James V. Constantine, CAB examiner, imposed Chaconas' penalty.

Ramadier, Plagued by Strikes, To Seek Vote of Confidence

Paris, June 25 (AP).—Premier Paul Ramadier, plagued by a major strike of nearly 200,000 coal miners and many other stoppages, decided today to ask the National Assembly for a vote of confidence.

The test was scheduled for next Tuesday or Wednesday as the parties have tacitly agreed to a political truce during the opening days of the French-British-Russian conference on the Marshall plan.

Industrial Production Minister Robert LaCoste said the miners' strike was costing the country 85,000 tons of desperately needed coal daily, and if it continues would force one third of the nation's steel mills to close down.

Many of the strikers, including the miners, walked out in protest against Ramadier's drastic new tax bill approved by the assembly yesterday.

Meanwhile, 62,000 auto workers still were out, the banks were closed throughout the nation, department stores were still shut, and workers in the huge metal-working industry and 40,000 in the textile mills were threatening to strike.

New Tax Bill Studied on Hill

until they have the two-thirds majority needed in the Senate. . . . I am quite sure we can override in the House. But before we get started over here, we want to be sure of what the Senate will do."

Martin said the new bill could be put through the House "in a day" if it was certain the Senate had a two-thirds majority.

Senator Byrd tied an important condition to his statement that he would be inclined to vote for tax reduction starting January 1. It was this: That Congress obey the congressional reorganization law and establish a ceiling on expenditures.

The "ceiling" resolution has been bogged down in conference since March 4. The House voted to cut the President's budget six billion dollars and the Senate voted a 4½ billion cut. Conferees have never resolved the difference.

Said Byrd: "I feel I can say with definite certainty that if the Republican Party establishes a ceiling on expenditures, and continues to reduce expenditures, a tax reduction effective January 1 can be enacted by Congress, even though vetoed by the President, which I do not believe will occur."

Byrd pointed out by moving the tax cut date up from July 1 to next January 1, the four-billion-dollar revenue loss from the bill next year would be halved.

"This, together with the reductions in appropriation bills now being effected, makes certain, in my judgment, a debt payment, after this tax reduction, in the next fiscal year of not less than $2,600,000 as provided in the (budget) resolution."

Byrd and other Democratic members of the Finance Committee originally voted to postpone the tax cut until January 1.

Nimitz Urges Aid to Latins

cost would be "less than the Army's."

Officials said the extensive program involves no more expense than this because most of the arms which would be transferred are surplus weapons left over from the war.

Eisenhower emphasized the importance of the closest cooperation of the defense forces of Canada and the United States. He told the committee that in the event of war, the "initial" assault would include an air attack against the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River Valley industrial areas.

Nimitz told the committee that it will be the intent of the United States under the program to "maintain the present balance of power" in the navies of Latin America. The transfers largely will involve transfers of newer American ships for old craft built in European yards.

He said that probably no capital ships would be transferred, and that for the most part they would be coastal defense types.

A naval source revealed that at one time the program involved four cruisers and 117 smaller craft. This has been scaled down somewhat, it was said.

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) questioned Eisenhower about the advisability of sending arms to such countries as Argentina and Paraguay. Would not arming nations "with such oppressive governments," she asked, aid in the spread of communism?

"We are trying to promote a family of nations in the Americas," the Army chief replied. "World experience shows that you can't have a famly if you exclude one nation."

Eisenhower added a moment later that "it is better to lead them into our concepts of Government than to invite them into others with which we do not agree."

All three top officials repeatedly declared that if we don't provide the other American countries with arms, they'll buy them elsewhere.

"Are any other powers trying to sell arms to Latin America?" asked Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.)

Eisenhower replied with a laconic, "yes".

He turned off another question along this line and the committee did not press him.

Chairman Eaton (R., N. J.) asked Eisenhower to comment on "Communist propaganda" painting the plan as an attempt to "create an American munitions makers monopoly" in the Americas.

"Ike" replied that the amount of arms to be manufactured under the program was too small to make this creditable. And he added that he'd found "no one that deplores war more than the American businessman."

Industry Germans' Only Hope, Seventh-Day Adventists Told

The only hope of saving Germany is to open industry so there will be employment and production, Elder L. K. Dickson, vice president of the General Conference, world headquarters of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, said last night.

Addressing the Dorcas Federation of Welfare Societies of the Potomac Conference at Takoma Park, Mr. Dickson made a plea to continue sending relief to European countries. Recently returned from Germany, he told of lines of people in Hamburg, waiting their turn to work over refuse in garbage cans behind hotels with hope of getting a little food.

Hundreds of thousands of people are living in homes dug out of the rubble of cities, he said. In subzero weather, he saw old people with little clothing and only paper on their feet for shoes.

"Germany is dying, just dying," Elder Dickson said.

He estimated that 7000 Adventist Church members in Europe have no homes and are wandering around unwanted. The churches, he said, have a tremendous job in helping to save lives with food. He predicted the coming winter will be critical and urged churches to continue to gather clothing and to prepare for heavier requirements.

At the seventh day session of the 10-day camp meeting, the Dorcas Federation was represented by 14 societies, which sent 1000 boxes of clothing and materials overseas.

Religious Publicists Form Chapter Here

Veto of Wool Bill Expected From Truman

President Truman will send a message to Congress today or tomorrow which, high Administration sources indicated, will veto the wool bill because of its tariff provisions, while indorsing its price support provisions.

The tariff provisions of the bill have been supported by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and vigorously opposed by the State Department.

In its final advice to the President, the State Department has reportedly held a veto necessary if American foreign economic policy objectives are to be attained.

Overell Case Juror Tells Of Attack

Santa Ana, Calif., June 25 (AP).—An attack on a woman juror in the Overell murder case was reported to police today and there were indications the jury will be locked up for the remainder of the trial, expected to last two months more.

Mrs. Putnam

J. H. Mulvey, chief investigator for the attorney general's office, identified the juror as Mrs. Uvon Putnam, 29, red-haired wife of a carpenter.

He quoted her as saying she was sitting in the kitchen of her Balboa Island apartment about midnight when she was slapped from behind on both cheeks and a masculine voice warned:

"This isn't all you'll get if you find them guilty."

On trial for yacht murder in the slayings of Financier and Mrs. Walter E. Overell of fashionable Flintridge are their only child, Louise, 18, and her fiance, George Collum, 21, medical student.

They were accused in a prosecution statement yesterday of bludgeoning the pair to death, because of an "illicit, sadistic passion amounting almost to a frenzy." Parental opposition to their marriage has been charged.

Mulvey said Mrs. Putnam told Newport Beach Police Chief R. R. Hodgkinson she could not identify her assailant. An inquiry turned up neither fingerprints nor footprints and that the man apparently escaped down an alley.

Vatican Says War Can't End Communism

Rome, June 25.—The Vatican told the democracies today that war cannot stamp out communism. The statement was part of the Vatican's fourth appeal for peace in less than a month.

Like the previous appeals the statement was published as an editorial in the Vatican's daily newspaper "L'Osservatore Romano."

The series of articles has caused widespread interest as an indication of a change of Vatican policy toward its generation-old enemy, Communist Russia.

The series has been the work of Count Guiseppi Dalla Torre, the layman who has been editor of "L'Osservatore Romano" for 27 years. Count Dalla Torre said today that Pope Pius XII has not been reading the articles before publication "but you can be sure he has seen them after they have appeared."

The theme of the series has been an appeal to Russia on the one hand and the United States and Great Britain on the other to give up present war preparations and to base their policies on "mutual confidence." The articles have indicated "that the United States should abandon the Truman doctrine in Greece and Turkey because of its implied threat to Russia and that Russia should withdraw from the satellite states."

Today's article praised the European plan of Secretary of State George C. Marshall as the proper highway to peace.

It asserted gloomily, however, that despite the Marshall proposal "the world is still not convinced that it is brotherhood which will win and egoism which will be fatal."

Angry Buckley Takes Stand

find Representative Buckley but did not send anyone to Buckley's farm because the Congressman's office assured the Justice Department Buckley was "not there." Paisley said he felt "Mr. Buckley is the one who owes us an apology."

The court ruled that no apologies were in order from anyone. Justice Schweinhaut said he was convinced the delay in Buckley's showing up was all "due to some misunderstanding."

Buckley finally agreed to be sworn in. He said he lent the $5000 to May as an "accommodation" to a fellow Congressman and, as he recalled it, gave May a check for the amount.

Birthday

Two years ago today the United Nations was born in San Francisco. It was another effort to make visible the unity of mankind in keeping peace and insuring justice. Already the United Nations has come to have a personality of its own. This has its advantages and its disadvantages. On the plus side the knowledge that the body represents the conscience of humanity is assuredly a deterrent to the aggressor. In this respect the Assembly has become a real force in the life of all nations. Who can forget the cry of the Iranians living in the heart of Asia who called out "Long Live the United Nations!" as they sped homeward the departing Russian soldiery? Nobody could withhold credit from the United Nations for the settlement, temporarily at least, of the crisis in Iran.

But there is a minus side to this attribution of personality to the United Nations. Some enthusiasts think that the United Nations, even in its present nursling stage, even before it has been completely organized, can settle all the world's problems. That is the way to cripple the United Nations before it gets properly established. Already the authority of the United Nations has been severely tested in the application of its influence. Argentina has the dubious honor of being the first country to defy the world organization. This it did by sending an ambassador to Madrid on the heels of an Assembly decision, which all countries save Argentina respected, to withdraw ambassadors from Franco's Spain. Bulgaria likewise thumbed its nose at the United Nations by refusing to cooperate with the continuing border commission for Greece. Neither of these cases should be ignored by those who are jealous of the prestige of the United Nations.

At the same time a lesson of these tests is that one must be careful not to load upon the United Nations tasks that can better be undertaken outside it. Our aid to Greece was in this category, and this applies, in our opinion, to economic integration or union in Europe. It does not matter who does the work of adding another brick to the creation of better relations among the nations. The criterion is what method is the most expeditious. Certainly if Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg had remitted the job of fixing up a customs union in the Low Countries to the United Nations, the job would have been retarded, to say the least. That would assuredly be the case if the U. N.'s Economic Commission were given the more intricate job of integrating Europe's economies. All that the United Nations should be interested in is in seeing these necessary tasks done. A happy birthday to the United Nations and a wish that before another one comes around the organization will be completed!

Hail, Columbia!

The announcement that General Eisenhower will retire as Chief of Staff to become president of Columbia University is an interesting surprise, although there had been rumors that something of the sort was in the wind. As far as the general himself is concerned, the decision to accept the offer seems altogether well advised. It assures him for the rest of his active life a position of great honor and influence, while removing him from any temptation to compromise his splendid reputation by involving himself in politics as a presidential candidate.

The appointment of a distinguished soldier to such a post is of course not without a precedent. General Lee, as everyone knows, spent the later years of his life as president of Washington College, which has since become Washington and Lee University. General Eisenhower's responsibility will, of course, be vaster and more difficult than General Lee's, for Columbia is perhaps the most stupendous educational enterprise in history, with tens of thousands of students and endowments running into hundreds of millions. Yet even this great administrative responsibility seems rather modest in comparison to the responsibilities of the supreme allied commander in the European theater. Thus in every particular, except perhaps scholarship, it would have been very hard for the trustees of Columbia to have found anyone better qualified than General Eisenhower to fill the place of the great Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler. The qualities wherewith General Eisenhower was able to earn his great success abroad and his certain place in history, that is to say his tact, diplomacy and ability to obtain harmonious and efficient cooperation from mutually jealous and suspicious subordinates, should prove most valuable indeed in his relations with his faculty. The Post, therefore, extends its congratulations to both General Eisenhower and the university.

Aims In The Americas

The quest in Europe for bigger communities within the framework of the United Nations is paralleled on the American continent. Here we already have what is known as the inter-American system. The system rests on no exclusive or preferential ties in the trade dealings among the 21 republics. It is a bond of interdependence made out of hundreds of recommendations, resolutions, conventions, and treaties which testify to a sense of neighborliness. Some time ago the proposal came from Mexico that this conglomeration of links should be put together into a systematic chain of relationship. In other words, that there should be an all-in, organic charter for the Americas. The proposal, made by Mexico's cultivated Secretary of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Jaime Torres Bodet, has now been given the blessing of the governing board of the Pan American Union. The board also has taken upon itself the drafting of such a charter, which will be submitted to the ninth Pan-American conference to be held at Bogota in January of 1948.

The proposed charter would not, of course, be a pact of confederation. But it would pull together the republics in an organized juridical system which would give an impetus to even closer ties as experience under the system grew. Already some enthusiasts below the Rio Grande are making what may be a historic decision the theme for redreaming the dream of Simon Bolivar. Bolivar was the first man to give definite shape to the Pan-American movement. As early as 1826, the great Latin-American liberator convoked a continental assembly, the objective of which was to sign a pact of confederation. It was an abortive effort, but the dream lived on. It was shared by North American statesmen from Henry Clay to James G. Blaine, the latter of whom sought unavailingly to set up a customs union. Aspirations since Blaine have been more modest. It has been felt that the way to achieve confederation is to prepare the way by cultivating common interests and by recognizing them in a series of covenants. The new stage to be reached at Bogota is one of codification—the necessary preparatory stage to confederation. It is a task destined to inspire the energy and devotion of every statesman worthy of the name in North and South America.

Men of peace will the more eagerly embrace this task because it may help to sidetrack the Truman counterquest for a military alliance through the military staffs. The arms bill offered to Congress by President Truman is destined to promote such an alliance. Secretaries Marshall and Patterson espoused the measure on Monday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. We hope they made no impression on Congress. Those who were at the Chapultepec conference witnessed the beginnings of a juridical compact among the Americas which the proposed military cooperation bill would arrest. Worse, the clock would be turned back, and our inter-American system would be reduced to a combine engaged in militarizing the Americas in concert. In our opinion the project is fraught with disaster for our continental peace and growth. It would make the Latins jittery over the arms transactions of neighbors, put arms in the hands of petty dictators, persuade constructive-minded nations to junk peaceful development, commit the United States to the role of holding the balance of power between nation and nation, and elevate the military staffs of the Americas into a position of more and more authority over the policies of their countries.

The arms proposal is backed on two grounds neither of which is tenable. One is that as an arms seller and arms standardizer and military trainer the United States would be able to control and therefore restriet the arms traffic. We confess we distrust arms control by means of arms sales, even in the preliminary form of exchanging new arms for old. Then, according to Mr. Marshall, we could prevent an arms traffic with Latin America on the part of non-American nations as soon as we have standardized Latin-American arms. This excuse reflects the Army preoccupation with Latin America as a battlefield with Russia. Our first thought, it seems to us, should be to regard the Americas as forming a peaceful community, and the bent of our policy should be to develop this continental community along the lines of the Mexican proposal, not to band together the military staffs and improve the military establishments of this continent in preparation for World War III. The object of our new policy in Europe is to encourage the growth of a community by peaceful development. Why not in the Americas, too—where the idea has a half century of history and growth?

Way To Air Safety

As its contribution to prevention of airplane accidents, the Senate Appropriations Committee has sliced nearly 38 per cent off the slim budget allowed the Civil Aeronautics Administration for all-weather landing aids. In this the committee showed itself to be even more shortsighted than the House, which already had taken a severe toll before the Senate started to work. Senator Ball set the tone for the upper chamber's action in his statement: "We struck out most of the money for new GCA (ground control approach) equipment, ILS (instrument landing) systems and high intensity lighting. We feel that they are not sufficiently proven and their upkeep cost is high. Also, it seems that the Army is going off in one direction, the Navy another and the CAA still another. They should get together."

It is true that present research endeavors are diverse, and that more unanimity would be helpful. But the Army and Navy frequently have different standards from those applied to civilian air transport, and they are not concerned with operating the airways. At a time when public confidence is badly shaken and the economic future of the air transport industry is under a cloud, the way to necessary safety is hardly to obliterate the safety program. How would Senator Ball bring safety aids to the "proven" status otherwise than by installing and operating them? As the intimate regulator of air safety standards, the Government has a direct responsibility for promoting the navigational aids so drastically needed. Either it should perform its function fully or it should get out of the airline business.

To be sure, GCA and ILS are not a final answer to all-weather landing problems. Neither is a radar obstacle detector an absolute preventive of mountain crashes, though we take issue with the contention of the correspondent whose letter appears elsewhere on this page, in this category. The device developed by Howard Hughes, to which we alluded in an earlier editorial, is in some respects primitive. But there are other applications of radar, already proven, which give a much greater measure of security. It is fruitless to go into controversy as to the exact cause of the recent Blue Ridge tragedy. Doubtless, as our correspondent alleges, "maintenance-of-schedule madness" was a factor. Certainly the whole intricate problem of traffic patterns and airport facilities must be explored in any long-range approach to air safety. But to say that is not to excuse the failure to adapt specific devices to reduce the realm of potential human error as far as possible.

All this costs money. Though the CAA has not been as aggressive as we believe it should be, it cannot be blamed for not expanding its scope in research and inspection when Congress is so insensitive to the need. We cannot have it both ways. Either we pay what safety costs, or we continue to have the high rate of crashes that puts airline prospects in a nosedive. One salient point for Congress to remember is that the funds necessary for adequate safety measures are far less than the cost of allowing the air transport industry to collapse under us.

Dangerous Proposal

The private grain trade is pressing for an amendment to the bill authorizing extension of import-export controls that would prohibit the Commodity Credit Corporation from making any sales for export. It is expected that such an amendment will be offered from the Senate floor today. Ostensibly designed to "eliminate Government competition from business," the actual effect of the CCC's withdrawal would be greatly to reduce the amount of grain exports, for the simple reason that the private grain trade lacks the power exercised by the CCC to meet emergency situations by invoking emergency governmental powers.

For example, if a shipload of grain is moved to seaboard, the CCC does not have to await the arrival of a particular ship in order to speed the grain on its way. It loads the grain on any available ship in harbor in order to keep exports moving. Private shippers, however, cannot transfer their shipments; if a vessel is late they must hold the grain until it arrives as required by the commercial documents covering the export sale. Furthermore, private shippers cannot move wheat to export positions in anticipation of future export orders, as the CCC now does. The CCC through an arrangement with the Office of Defense Transportation is currently shipping Kansas winter wheat, which is now being harvested, from Wichita and Kansas City to Chicago. From that point the wheat moves by boat to Buffalo where it is in "export position." And from Buffalo the wheat will reach harbor by barge or rail.

This type of operation is designed to maintain a steady flow of grain to points from which it can be shipped without delay, preventing heavy accumulations at source and minimizing the strain on transportation facilities. Obviously private traders would be unable to systematize their operations in this fashion. The situation, in short, calls for a kind of over-all planning that can only be carried out by invoking governmental powers to meet an emergency. The Government is, in this instance, not competing with private enterprise, but is engaged in activities that private enterprise is not equipped to undertake. Passage of the amendment sponsored by the private grain trade would, therefore, inevitably result in delayed and diminished shipments of foodstuffs urgently needed by the hungry people of other lands.

YALE '97 TO HARVARD '97

Comrades in deed and spirit and in high
Unquestioning faith; we send you on this day
Cheers for the long adventure of the way
And many hopes that other days are nigh
Wherein the answers to the riddles lie,
Days filled with mornings that will sing and say
Behold! another flaming in the sky.

Together we went forth, altho' apart,
Dreamed the same dreams, sought for the clearer path,
Heard the same voices calling through the wrath,
Learned the same lessons of the conquering heart.
We pledge you still, through all the days that pale,
To you John Harvard, from our Eli Yale.

"South And Tax Cuts"

I read with interest your editorial of June 20, "South And Tax Cuts," in which you said, ". . . It is by no means clear why support for tax reduction should be so strong in the South as to cause a sizable group of House members to break away from the party line in this instance . . ."

The reason is simple. These so-called Democrats, who manage to vote so often with the reactionary Northern Republicans, represent the same vested interest in the South that the Republicans represent in the North. Their political profession of democracy too often comes second to their economic subservience to Northern interests which they so zealously protect at the expense of the Southern people.

We may expect this condition to continue so long as the majority of the Southern people are disfranchised by registration difficulties and poll tax on voting.

CLARK FOREMAN,
President Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

"Veto Caravan"

I must disagree with your editorial of June 19 condemning the veto caravan while praising the less demonstrative kind of lobbying. You state that the presence of the caravan "is not designed to throw light on the nature of pending labor legislation." Can you truthfully say that the usual, quieter and more effective forms of lobbying accomplish this altruistic end?

The present Congress and the lobbies that made it and are constantly throwing light on the nature of pending legislation have made up their collective mind as to what legislation they can get away with. President Truman appears to be a David, protecting the public from a congressional Goliath and its host of light-throwing assistants, with little beside a slingshot veto. A demonstration such as the veto caravan may serve a useful purpose if it does nothing more than remind the Congress that there are other voting groups in the country besides the NAM, the railroad trust, and the farm bloc. Atomic Questions

The following points need clarifying:

"We need training," Dr. Compton says "because the United States would have to move fast, if another war comes." In which direction, and how fast is a big army to move (1) to catch up with or (2) to get away from an atom before it splits?

1. The United States is intent on keeping the problem of atomic energy control in the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission and that of conventional disarmament in the 11-nation body appointed for that purpose. Is the 11-nation body not afraid of atom bombs? What nations in the Atomic Energy Commission are not afraid?

Labor Bill

Your editorial of June 21, "Veto of the Labor Bill," seems to be a fair summing up of the situation. The Taft-Hartley bill may not be perfect; but it represents an honest effort on the part of Congress to put our powerful labor organizations under some of the restrictions that employers have been under for some time. The bill is also an attempt to put a stop to a species of lawlessness from which the country as a whole is suffering. As such it would seem to deserve the support of public-spirited Americans of both political parties.

"Nevius Site"

I was indeed interested in your editorial "Nevius Site" of June 20. I was impressed by the impatience you show at apparent delays in the veterans' hospital development caused by Representative Howard Smith of Virginia.

I am wondering why General Bradley changed his mind after earnestly recommending the old Naval Hospital site.

Now just why the "Nevius Site"? Why not build the hospital inside the cemetery? Just think of the convenience. What a cheerful and encouraging sight for the poor sick veterans to sit and look at their final resting place. Is the veterans' happiness and peace of mind considered in this selection?

I do not know why Representative Smith is causing the delay but I do hope this matter will be given more consideration and that a veterans' hospital will not be placed beside a veterans' cemetery.

GEORGE P. SMITH.

Summer Camps

The article in The Post of June 22 about free summer camps seems to start with the premise that (1) every child must go to camp, and (2) the public at large rather than the child, or its parents, must pay for the camping recreation. A number of other recent feature stories seem to have the same predicate with reference to other things, often considered desirable, but only recently assumed to be indispensable.

Of course the camp is not indispensable. Many million good Americans have lived useful, pleasant lives, and died of natural causes at a ripe old age without at any time having been to a pleasure camp. The same is true of running water in the house, steam heat, porterhouse steak, automobiles, radios, gas and electricity, air-conditioners, and a long list of other very nice comfortable things which those who work and save enough of their own money to buy them, very properly want and acquire.

It is far different, and a dangerous doctrine, to aver that these things are necessities. It is worse to assert that the other citizens ought to or must, by force of the tax laws, supply such desirable but non-essential things at large to all who want them. That will lead, indeed it has led, to a general impression that "they"—the other folks—owe all who want such luxuries the wherewithal to get them. The healthy attitude would be that an opportunity to work, earn, and save for what is wanted, represents the social obligation, except in disaster. Y. D. MATHES.

"Airline Survival"

Your editorial of June 19, "Airline Survival," came to my attention just as I had completed my private analysis of the Blue Ridge airline crash of June 13, with information taken from the official preliminary report of the chairman, Civil Aeronautics Board.

According to your analysis—which is quite in line with conventional ones—the crash was due primarily to pilot error, with lack of adequate safety precautions a contributing factor. In my own analysis I place the primary cause as inadequacy of Washington's airport facilities, with maintenance-of-schedule madness as a contributing factor, and pilot error not established.

I am a private pilot of some 20 years of experience in flying, and in rigid study of aviation generally. Prior to the war I acted, for several years, as an engineer consultant to aviation insurance underwriters, studying air crashes and their prevention. Now I get the realistic and unrestrained opinions of airline pilots that the radar instrument which you mention is not what you assume it to be when you imply that the Capital airliner would not have crashed into the mountain had it been equipped with this instrument.

Airline pilots tell me that by the time this instrument has warned the pilot of an obstruction, like a mountain, in his flight path, it is too late to do anything about it. That probably explains the absence of these instruments on most of the airliners. It is badly fair to build up public confidence in a device that has not been accepted by all users as of proven dependability.

An examination of the official report gives me the information that the crash occurred in the process of the pilot's attempt to carry out a change in approach procedure plan, which change had the approval of Air Traffic Control and the airline's own dispatcher. The purpose of the change was to avoid "stacking" over the Washington area, and thus to avoid a delay of about an hour in scheduled time of arrival that would ensue.

It should be clear that the collision occurred in the process of an attempt to overcome with pilot maneuvering the inadequacy of the Washington National Airport to handle such traffic as aviation progress has imposed upon it. Had there been a second airport, outside the traffic pattern of the National Airport, the "stacking" load could have been divided between the two.

Such an airport was urged upon the Congress by airline pilots during the sessions of 1937 and 1938. Bills to provide this second large airport were defeated by the combined opposition of airline executives, special interests in real estate, the newspapers, the United States Navy, CAA apathy to the plan, and the lay public which wanted the municipal airport to be as near as possible to their front-door steps and saw no reason for more than one airport.

The bills would have given Washington the largest airport in the world on a site free of any obstructions, safely outside the local area traffic pattern and yet less than a 30-minute drive from the center of the city. That could have been Washington's second (outside) airport. It took a world war to get congressional approval of its purchase, in the interests of national defense, but it belongs to the Army, and is called Andrews Field.

Gadgets and new rules are necessary to meet the needs of air transportation, but in my judgment our first step toward a reduction in air accidents should be a plan (in which Congress must play an important part) to give all major airline centers an opportunity to meet expanded and modernized airline operation with appropriate airport and air traffic facilities. New York City, at long last, has made such a plan. It will produce three airline airports.

The CAA must hereafter withhold approval of airports that constitute compromises with reasonable safety—such as LaGuardia Field, with its short runway that took so many lives in a recent crash. The airlines cannot survive if their executives and municipal authorities persist in the fallacy that minimum surface travel to and from the airport means maximum aviation success.

Conjugal Conscience

By Malvina Lindsay

Nazi Wives' Guilt

THE QUESTION of how far marriage partnership extends has been raised by the trials of Nazi leaders' wives. Some feminists are concerned lest these women be tried for their marriage connections with nazism, rather than wholly on the basis of their own contribution to its activities and atrocities. Also, sentiment has been aroused over the children involved, most of whose fathers have been hanged or imprisoned.

However, a German denazification court has set an example in leniency in the case of Frau Sauckel, widow of Fritz Sauckel and mother of 10, who was fined 1000 marks ($100) and admonished to go home and rear her children in the democratic way.

One doubts, if the widow of a man who deported five million human beings for slave labor, and who advocated putting the sick and aged to death as "useless eaters," will know much about democratic education. But, of course, Frau Sauckel was not being tried for her husband's sins. Denazification officials point out that these high-ranking Nazi women—and a lot of lesser persons are being tried because they benefitted from the Nazi regime.

CHIEF ONE to benefit was Frau Emmy Goering, on whom the reichsmarshal hung his looted jewels, and whose bed was warmed by pet lion cubs he wrestled with for relaxation. Frau Goering also is accused of having been a go-between for her husband in collecting millions of dollars in bribes from concentration camp victims. The former actress, who became the golden-haired Valkyrie of Hitler's court, now lies on a prison cot wasted with rheumatism.

Frau Goering apparently was the fence of one of the greatest extortionists in history. How much the other Nazi wives knew of their husbands' criminality can only be guessed. Frau Himmler, widow of Hitler's Gestapo chief, expressed their attitude—and that of all other Nazi wives, including the housewives of Weimar who shut their eyes to Buchenwald—when she said, "As a woman I know nothing of politics"—a line not entirely unfamiliar here.

Perhaps Frau Brigette Frank was too busy with her five children and her sauerbraten to know that her husband, Hans Frank, governor general of Poland, was exterminating six million people, boasting in his diary he had starved a million Jews to death.

Perhaps Frau Margarete Frick, who reads the Bible constantly in her cell, had no idea her husband was drawing up legal codes extending the punishment of beheading to such offenses as simple burglary.

OR PERHAPS, as is more likely, these Nazi wives did know, and tried to forget or rationalize. Perhaps, like many other German women, they "put up with things just to keep peace"—an explanation given by an anti-Nazi refugee in this country of her countrywomen's character. (Perhaps they knew and didn't care, for polls have shown that Nazi women were more bigoted and intolerant than Nazi men.

At any rate these women, being "New Order" wives, didn't have to bother their minds or consciences about the character or acts of the men who shared their bed and board. Now it is one of the ironies of history that Hitler's code for women should have placed those who played the roles of parlor ornaments or menials on trial to pay for the evil fruits of a political system.

Hitler tried to turn the clock back in marriage by giving husbands more material dominance and weakening mental partnership. The democratic trend has been to lessen husbands' material power, such as control of children and of wives' property, and to strengthen mental cooperation in home, business politics. Trials of the Nazi wives are a final public demonstration of how fallacious and dangerous was the Hitler code. They show there is no tight little sanctuary or prison in which one member of a marital team can safely mind his or her own business.

Dupont Circle

While it is agreed that conditions at Dupont Circle are not ideal at the present time, the Highway Department's proposed solution has received any but unanimous indorsement by traffic and transportation engineers.

The views of the independent traffic authorities who have had an opportunity to study Dupont Circle, however, have not been adequately presented to the public. In fairness to the taxpayers of the District of Columbia, to the taxpayers of the Nation who will foot a large percentage of the bill for this project and for this metropolitan area's over-all roadway plan, and to the motorists of the District of Columbia and of the Nation, the complete picture (including the points stressed by the opposition) should be made available to all.

Ideal Father

You have given your readers a specific against juvenile delinquency in your description of the "ideal father's" family life.

No social derelicts can come from a home of that kind. All the work of the scientists cannot do more for the distraught world today than enough homes like the ones you have shown us.

Can't you give us one of your strong editorials on the subject? It is well worthwhile.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Veto Overridden

WE NOW HAVE a labor law which the President, who must administer it, has said is unworkable and unjust. Therefore, if the results are as bad as the President predicted, his Republican and Democratic opponents on this issue will say that he caused the law to fail: that he encouraged resistance to the law and did not administer it sincerely. If, on the other hand, the law works out better than he says it will, he will have refuted his own arguments for vetoing it.

Lippmann

A dilemma of this kind, when so much is at stake as in labor relations, could not be posed in Canada, Great Britain, or in any other country which has a democratic government. There would be a new Administration, once the legislature had expressed itself as decisively as did the Congress in overriding the President's opposition. A new Administration headed by Messrs. Taft and Hartley, and composed of men who believed in the law, would take office to administer it.

There would then be no confusion of responsibility about its success or its failure. Mr. Truman would be out of office, free to hold Mr. Taft accountable for the consequences of Mr. Taft's law. But under our system Mr. Taft is still in the opposition, free to hold Mr. Truman accountable for the success of the law that Mr. Taft wrote and Mr. Truman denounced.

IN SAYING this I am not supposing that our presidential system can or will be altered, and a system of parliamentary government put in its place. There are enormous advantages in our system, not the least of them being that we are used to it. But every system of government has its disadvantages, and there is no doubt that President Truman's dilemma illustrates sharply the greatest weakness of our system.

It is that when the people decide to change the direction and policy of the Government, it takes them several years to change it. It takes them two years to change the House of Representatives, four years to change the Executive, and it may take as much as four to change the Senate. During the period of change, when one party is coming into power by installments and the other is going out of power by installments, authority is divided. There is an interregnum. Mr. Truman is President during such an interregnum, and his position is all the worse in opposing the will of a Congress, which was recently elected by the people, because he happens never to have been elected President of the United States, and therefore to have only a nominal, an ex-officio, mandate from the people.

THE PROBLEM of the labor law has been whether enough common sense and good will could be mustered to overcome the inherent difficulties when the President belongs to one party and the Congress to the other. In the field of foreign relations that has in considerable measure been done because there the patriotic feeling that politics should stop at the water's edge is a powerful offset to partisanship.

But in domestic affairs—particularly in such matters as taxation and labor laws—it is much harder to legislate by agreement of the parties. The issues are not the sort on which the whole people can be expected to agree. They are issues which have to be decided by majority rule, and the minority must not be asked to agree with the verdict but only to accept it loyally and with good grace.

MR. TRUMAN had ample notice that this Congress held a mandate from the people to write a law for the purpose of reducing the power of organized labor in American society. What should he have done? I think he should have told Congress explicitly and specifically while the law was in the making which provisions he would approve and which he could not approve. He should not have made a mystery of his position if he intended to take part in the lawmaking process by exercising his veto. He should either have abstained entirely by not using his veto or have taken a responsible part in shaping the legislation while it was in the works.

Then, even if he had failed to achieve a compromise which he could approve, he would not be in his present dilemma of having to enforce a law which he has totally disapproved. He would be enforcing a law which in certain specific respects he disapproved, and he could then have asked Congress to observe the supposed defects of the law and to amend them later on.

THE GENERAL counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, Mr. Gerhard P. van Arkel, has resigned for the sound reason that he does not believe in the new law and, therefore, ought not to administer it. Obviously Mr. Truman is not going to follow Mr. van Arkel's example. But it seems to me clear that he ought to act in the spirit of Mr. van Arkel's action.

He ought to ask the whole National Labor Relations Board to resign, and he ought to ask the leaders of the Republican-Democratic coalition, which overrode his veto, to submit an agreed list of candidates from whom he can select men to administer the law. Then the law will be in the hands of men who believe in it, and the President will, after making his protest, have accepted the unmistakable and unchallengeable verdict of the Congress.

Washington Calling

Kick 'Em Upstairs

OFTEN MINOR moves on the political chessboard cause more speculation than the big jumps which make the headlines. The minor moves are studied for their relation to grand strategy.

Childs

Ordinarily an appointment to the Federal Communications Commission is about as routine as the naming of a postmaster. But the appointment of Representative Robert F. Jones of Ohio to a place on that commission has touched off a flood of rumor and speculation.

Item 1 of the great Jones mystery is the strange way in which the appointment was made. The White House first sent to the Senate the name of Ray C. Wakefield to be reappointed to the commission for a 7-year term. Wakefield has been one of the Republican members of the bipartisan commission.

Before his first appointment in 1941, he was a member of the California Utilities Commission. There have been no complaints about his performance on the FCC nor has his Republicanism ever been challenged. He was once a member of California's Republican Central Committee and a delegate to at least one national convention.

Shortly after the Wakefield nomination was sent to the Senate, Leslie Biffle, shepherd of the Democratic minority, got a call from the White House. He was asked if it would be possible under Senate procedure to withdraw the Wakefield nomination. He replied that it was perfectly possible, and shortly afterward the nomination was recalled.

Then, almost at once, Jones' name was sent up for approval as a commissioner.

ITEM 2 in the mystery is why this particular Republican was preferred over a man who knew the work of the commission and was eager for reappointment. Jones is a modest example of Taft Republicanism now serving his fifth term in Congress. Almost his only claim to distinction is that as chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee dealing with the Department of the Interior he engineered a record cut in the department's funds.

He is considered an outstanding foe of public power development. The issue of public power is at the heart of the struggle between Congress and the Interior Department. Interior wants to make low-cost power from its reclamation projects available to consumers through cooperatives and rural electrification units, thereby eliminating the profit of the distributor.

The opposition says that the power from the projects should be sold at cost to private firms for distribution. Jones is credited with giving this opposition a big assist. He says he is not opposed to public power. But the fact remains that he headed the committee which cut so deeply into Western development that Senate Republicans from Western States were concerned and insisted on restoring some of the cuts.

The Federal Communications Commission deals, of course, with great utilities such as American Telephone & Telegraph Co. Jones' attitude in these matters will have a direct bearing on his work on the commission.

ONE EXPLANATION for the Jones appointment is the familiar theory of kick 'em upstairs where they'll do less harm. That was the idea behind the appointment of former Oklahoma Representative Jed Johnson to be a judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

Johnson, a Democrat, was chairman of the subcommittee on Interior appropriations before Jones took over. Former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes accused Johnson of repeatedly blocking the work of his department. Ickes recently testified that he had recommended Johnson's judicial appointment because he believed he would do less harm on the five-man customs court than in the House.

The kick 'em upstairs technique has its dangers and limitations. It is in fact a form of bribery, and bribery is likely to prove expensive in the long run. Representative Jones will be succeeded as congressional boss of the Interior Department's appropriation by Representative Ben Jensen of Iowa, who is said to take an even darker view of public power and reclamation than Jones.

There are more elaborate explanations for the Jones' appointment. They're probably too elaborate. Perhaps it can be put down as another blunder, comparable to the appointment of James K. Vardaman to the Federal Reserve Board, a mistake which has been bitterly regretted in the White House. These blunders can be costly, not merely to the politicians but to the public, which means all of us.

The Paris Talks

By Barnet Nover

What Is Russia After?

TUCKED AWAY in the middle of the Russian note accepting the Anglo-French invitation to participate in talks on the Marshall plan is an innocent-sounding passage which may prove to be loaded with Soviet dynamite.

NOVER

After agreeing that "at present the primary task of European countries is the speediest possible rehabilitation and further development of their national economies disrupted by the war," the note went on to say:

"It is self-evident that this task could be facilitated if assistance, conforming to the above aims, were rendered by the United States of America, whose production potentialities, far from declining, increased during the war."

AT FIRST GLANCE this passage seems to be nothing more than a statement of fact.

It is certainly true that the production facilities of the United States increased during the war. It is also true that the United States is in a position to facilitate the task of European rehabilitation.

Indeed, it was precisely with this in mind that Secretary Marshall made his now historic proposal at Harvard, a proposal which has generated a wave of enthusiasm that has swept Europe like a tidal wave.

BUT WHY DID the Kremlin find it necessary to labor the obvious?

The answer to that question is to be found in the fact that, like the name of a certain laxative, that particular sentence in the Russian note only makes sense if it is read backwards.

In calling attention to the wealth of America, Molotov was really emphasizing the poverty of Russia the losses that she suffered, the destruction that was visited upon her. In that manner the Soviet government was seeking to lay the groundwork for the claim that in dividing the rehabilitation pie baked by Uncle Sam, Russia, as the greatest war sufferer, deserves the largest slice.

In other words, there is a possibility that, at Paris, Russia will try to twist the Marshall plan so as to transform it into a new and grandiose UNRRA in which the beneficiaries of American aid will themselves be allowed to determine the conditions upon which that aid is to be rendered.

IN THIS CONNECTION the line now taken on the Marshall plan by newspapers that mirror the Kremlin's views is of very real significance.

For the Marshall plan to be a real contribution to Europe's recovery, these journalistic mouthpieces of Moscow insist it must be purely economic and wholly nonpolitical.

THUS Pravda, organ of the Russian Communist Party, declared on the eve of the Paris meeting, that if American aid to Europe contained any such conditions as those embodied in the recent grants to Greece and Turkey, it would "mean in fact interference in the internal affairs of European states and an infringement of their sovereignty."

To such conditions, Pravda added, "not a single European nation which respects itself could agree."

In view of Russia's record in Hungary, Bulgaria, Romania, Yugoslavia, Poland and other countries, not to mention what happened to Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania, it is passing strange to have Russia pose as the champion of noninterference in and the sovereignty of small states.

Such monumental hypocrisy, alas, is only too familiar an aspect of Soviet diplomacy.

What is important in the Pravda statement is that Russia is maneuvering to create a situation in which, so far as the USSR is concerned, it will be "heads I win, tails you lose."

IF AMERICAN aid is conditional, Pravda indicates it will be rejected and the blame for Europe's deepening misery will be placed on the shoulders of the United States.

On the other hand, if that aid is unconditional (which nobody in his right mind can believe) Russia and her satellites would be placed in the happy position of getting something for nothing.

However, we have the clear words of General Marshall with respect to this. He said at Harvard:

Any government which maneuvers to block the recovery of other countries cannot expect help from us. Furthermore, governments, political parties or groups which seek to perpetuate human misery in order to profit therefrom politically or otherwise will encounter the opposition of the United States."

Eccles Warns Easy Credit Might Bring on Recession

By The Associated Press

Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve chairman, declared yesterday that "overexpansion" of credit might lead to a "very painful" recession within the next few years.

If that happens, he told the Senate Banking Committee, we are "going to have real difficulty."

Urging Congress to extend for one year the present Government controls over installment buying, Eccles said the regulations were needed for two reasons:

1. To prevent an expansion of demand on an "easy credit" basis for cars, refrigerators, stoves, washing machines and similar consumer goods that will be in short supply for some months or years, and

2. To allow lower prices through competition rather than on "soft" payment terms.

Eccles said that President Truman, the Reserve Board and other administration advisers favor extension of these "mild controls" but have agreed to leave the decision to Congress.

At present the general requirement for down payment of one-third with a 15-month limit on paying the remainder is operated under an executive order based on the War Powers Act.

Asked by committee members why the board and the President did not continue the wartime restrictions on their own authority, Eccles replied that there would be better "public acceptance" if Congress specifically approved the extension of controls in peacetime.

Senator Buck (R., Del.), acting chairman, told reporters he favored the extension, but declined to forecast what the banking committee would do at a closed session today. The House Banking Committee already has approved a bill taking off controls immediately on passage by Congress.

Vaccine Making With Aid of Atom Energy Predicted

South Bend, Ind., June 25 (AP).—A Notre Dame chemist told today how he believed vaccines for combatting disease might be produced on a large scale with the aid of atomic energy.

Answering a reporter's question regarding brief references he has made to such a possibility in the past, Dr. Milton Burton, one of the key workers on the wartime A-bomb project, gave this outline:

Vaccines against certain virus diseases contain germs which have been "inactivated"—that is, the part of the germ that causes infection has been destroyed. The organism still is able, however, to stimulate the production of "Antibodies"—nature's own defense mechanisms—in the body of the person vaccinated.

At present, one of the methods of "inactivating" viruses is exposure of them to ultra-violet rays.

But ultra-violet radiation is of the low penetration, allowing treatment of only a thin layer of viruses at one time.

On the other hand, "rays" produced in atomic energy plants when uranium atoms are split, are extremely penetrating, thus permitting treatment of large quantities of material.

Danzansky Heads District Jewish War Veterans

The District convention, held at the John E. Barnard Wilner Post 381, 3147 16th st. nw., expressed accord with the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill providing adequate housing for veterans. It also approved the Stratton bill, providing immigration into the United States of displaced persons.

Danzansky succeeds Benjamin Aronsohn. Other officers elected and installed by National Representative Joseph Barr were:

Philip Fox, Post 386, senior vice commander; Theodore Bollt, Post 58, junior vice commander; Morris Kraisel, Post 58, judge advocate, and Morris D. Cohen, Post 381, quartermaster.

Cigarette Shipment Ban Extended by Army

Frankfurt, Germany, June 25 (AP). The United States Army today banned the shipment of American cigarettes to military personnel in Austria and France, effective July 1.

Mailing of tobacco goods to Germany was prohibited March 28. The Army said it hoped the order would "cut black market trading in cigarettes, tobacco and cigars."

Apartment Owners Seek 14% Rent Hike

The owners of the Cavalier Apartments, 3500 14th st. nw., yesterday went before District Rent Control Examiner Robert T. Smith seeking an average rent increase of 14 per cent from 203 of their 219 tenants.

Frank L. Hagerman, manager of the apartments, testified that increased operating and maintenance costs since 1941 and capital improvements to the property made the increase necessary.

In 1940, he said, the firm had 35 employes at a semi-monthly pay roll of $1389.38. During the last two weeks of 1946 the firm paid its 34 employes $2043.31, he said.

The tenants will present their case today.

Chief Barrett To Be Sworn In On Tuesday

Detective Chief Robert J. Barrett will be sworn in as superintendent of the Metropolitan Police Department at 10 a. m. Tuesday.

The ceremony will be held in the District Building office of John Russell Young, president of the Board of Commissioners.

This was announced yesterday after Barrett paid the Commissioners an informal call.

The Commissioners selected Barrett for the post Tuesday, to succeed Maj. Harvey G. Callahan, who retired because of failing health.

The 45-year-old appointee is a veteran of 22 years of service on the local police department.

FBI Academy to Graduate 89 Policemen and Officers

Eighty-nine policemen and officers attending the thirty-fifth session of the FBI National Academy will receive diplomas at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the Departmental Auditorium, 13th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

In making the announcement yesterday, John Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, said the class included T/Sergt. James W. Lea of the Marine Corps Base at Quantico and Sergt. Norwood S. Page of the Marine Corps Camp Lejeune, N. C., the first two members of the armed forces admitted for training in the academy.

Among the graduates are: Lieut. John F. Hettchen, Baltimore Police Department; Thomas Edward Woods, detective, Alexandria Police Department; Walter R. Kennedy, jr., investigator, Warwick County, Va., Police Department; Allen L. Ford, jr., private and Robert B. King, investigator of the Richmond Police Department.

For Training

Airport Need At Academy Is Stressed

By The Associated Press

Rear Admiral James J. Holloway, jr., superintendent of the Annapolis Naval Academy, told a House Armed Services Subcommittee yesterday that acquisition of aviation training facilities at Annapolis is "the most pressing need" now at the academy.

Vice Admiral D. B. Duncan, deputy chief of Naval Operations for Air, testified that "an air station as part of the Naval Academy is urgently needed."

The Navy's request for a three-million-dollar appropriation for acquiring land at Sandy Point, near the academy, was opposed yesterday by a group led by Dr. Douglas Huntley Gordon, former president of St. John's College at Annapolis, which the Navy attempted to take over a year ago.

Holloway in answer to contentions of the opposition group that the eventual cost of the field would be "far higher" than the original amount asked, stated he had requested 10 million dollars for the fiscal year and a similar amount for 1950.

Academy Removal Studied

Duncan said the Navy is giving "some consideration" to removal of the academy to another location. Representative Cole (R., N. Y.) asked him if such a plan was "considered in view of substantial objections" made to the airfield project.

Mayor William McCready of Annapolis, who appeared in favor of the Navy's plan, said "the people objecting are the playboys of Baltimore and Washington."

Gordon later replied that "the Navy has other purposes in view—to build themselves a great playground" where the "playboys" now live.

Representative Bates (R., Mass.) said at this point that the "playboys' " assertion had been made by McCready and not by the Navy.

Gordon said in a statement submitted to the committee that the Navy is "making plans contemplating vast undertakings of unlimited cost which have not been frankly revealed to Congress . . . The project is not a necessity as asserted, but will be a Navy playground placed in and near the most highly developed waterfront residential area of the State."

Objections Are Listed

He said objections to the Sandy Point Field included the following:

1. Training planes operating over Chesapeake Bay, at its narrowest at Sandy Point, would endanger shipping traffic.

2. Presence of the Annapolis radio towers near Sandy Point constitute a menace to flying.

3. Technical training in aviation, even though limited to indoctrination, cannot be carried out at the academy.

Gordon said other available fields could be used for the training purposes the Navy desires. He named the Army's Pungo Field near Norfolk, Webster and Patuxent Field at Cedar Point, Md.; an abandoned Navy field at Beltsville, 19 miles from Annapolis, and Andrews Field in Prince Georges County.

Other Witnesses Appearing

Besides McCready, others appearing in support of the proposal were Irving P. Hall, president of the Annapolis Rotary Club; Albert H. MacCarthy, representing the Annapolis and Anne Arundel Chambers of Commerce and other civic groups, and John F. Murphy, commander of the Annapolis Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Those who opposed the project included Wilson K. Barnes, vice president of the Magothy River Association, representing families residing in the vicinity of the proposed field; E. Arch Seidel, Baltimore, representing the Steamship Trade Association of that city; George Englar, Baltimore Real Estate man; B. R. Geary, counsel for the Antiairport Association of Anne Arundel County; Fulton Lewis, editor of the Southern Maryland (weekly) Times; the Rev. Albert Cooper of St. Margaret's Church near the site; Mrs. June Lazenby Green of a women's antiairport committee, and William H. LaBrout, publisher of the Southern Maryland Times.

19 Corn Products Makers Charged With Conspiracy

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday accused 19 companies which manufacture and sell corn products of engaging in a "conspiracy to fix and maintain the prices, terms and conditions of the sale of their products."

The result of the alleged "combination and conspiracy," the FTC charged in a complaint placed on its docket, is "that competition in the industry has been suppressed." It added:

"The alleged price-fixing conspiracy has deprived consumers of the benefit of competition among the respondent producers."

In a statement announcing issuance of the complaint, the commission pointed out that the 19 firms "are said to account for 95 per cent of the corn derivatives manufactured and sold in the United States."

"Because of the extent of their business," it continued, "it is to the respondents that the public must look for its supplies of such products as corn syrups, corn sugars, dextrins, starches and corn oils."

Knitting Mill to Start Operation on July 15

Martinsville, Va., June 25 (AP).—A new knitting mill, Hampton-Wrenn, Inc., will start operations here about July 15, H. T. Cross, president of the company, announced today.

The mill will manufacture cloth for a variety of garments. Processes will include knitting, cutting, dyeing, sewing and finishing of materials the income tax only from individuals domiciled here, the new plan would make all persons domiciled here and those who live here seven months or more in the year file returns. Individuals who showed they had to pay an income tax or intangible property tax to a State would deduct the full amount of those payments from the District levy. If tax paid to the State was larger, the District would get nothing.

Both Houses have agreed on these revenue additions:

Four million dollars more a year from the Federal Government, making the new payment to the District 12 million dollars.

A franchise tax of 5 per cent on the income of unincorporated business over $10,000. This part of the income tax revision would produce $900,000 of the expected income for revenue increase.

A property tax boost from the present $1.75 to a new rate of $2 per $100 of assessed valuation, to raise $4,500,000 more a year.

A 25 per cent increase in water rates, to raise $800,000. The water fund would also get one million dollars of the increased Federal grant.

A gasoline tax increase of one cent a gallon, making the new rate four cents, to raise $1,600,000 for the highway fund.

A $1 fee for auto inspections, double the present fee, to make the inspection service pay for itself with an extra $65,000 a year.

House District Appropriations Chairman Walt Horan (R., Wash.), strong advocate of a sales tax, said the conference agreement meant his subcommittee might make a two-way report on the District budget, to show what the city can spend with the revenue in sight, and what additional spending needs should be met.

The money would then be distributed among men and women past 60, the blind, disabled, and mothers with dependent minor children. Recipients of the money, which would be about $100 a month per person, must retire and spend the money within 30 days.

Welcoming convention delegates at today's opening session at 9 a.m. will be Representative George P. Miller (D., Calif.), one of the nearly 70 sponsors of Townsend legislation in Congress. Other speakers will be Representative Homer D. Angell (R., Oreg), Representative Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) and Dr. Townsend's son, Robert C. Townsend, who is general manager of the Townsend National Recovery Plan, Inc.

Speakers at Thursday night's session will be Representative J. Hardin Peterson (D., Fla.), Representative Edwin Arthur Hall (R., N. Y.) and Representative Homer A. Ramey (R., Ohio).

Tomorrow delegates will call on their individual Congressmen to urge passage of the Townsend legislation.

Social Register Omits Mrs. Roosevelt's Name

New York, June 25 (AP).—The name of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt does not appear in the summer edition of the Social Register, issued today. Last summer's issue listed her as living at the Roosevelt estate in Hyde Park.

Mrs. Roosevelt's name is the second of her family to disappear from the register. Elliott Roosevelt was dropped when he wed his third wife, actress Fay Emerson.

English Wins Trial Delay Until July 2

Tommy English, 34, Washington underworld figure, won another continuance in District Court yesterday, despite Government insistence that the one-time Blackface Gang member go to trial immediately.

The delay until July 2 on English's trial for housebreaking was obtained by his new attorney, Ralph Stein. English's alleged accomplices, Eugene M. Mothershead and Clarence J. Craddock, are now in jail after pleading guilty to the offense.

Assistant United States Attorney Grace Stiles appeared before Justice Alexander Holtzoff to press for immediate trial. She pointed out that more than a week ago Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws ordered English to be ready for trial.

Stein told the court he was retained by English only last week and had not prepared the defense. Justice Holtzoff said the press of other business made trial impossible yesterday, and added that a week did not seem to be too long a delay.

English, Mothershead and Craddock were described by police as the "noisy safecrackers" who were apprehended September 30 while applying a hammer to a safe in an attempt to open it. The crime was committed, according to charges, in a grocery store.

Willett Quits As Director Of Chest

Resignation of Herbert L. Willett, jr., as director of the Washington Community Chest, effective June 30, was announced yesterday.

Willett

His departure will end nearly 17 years service to the organiza-

The announcement came late yesterday from the executive committee of its board of trustees.

Last March Willett resigned as director of the Community Chest Federation for the National Capital Area. At that time Daniel W. Bell, Federation president, said Willett would continue as head of the Washington Chest, the largest member of the Federation.

June 30 is the effective date of both resignations.

Willett's letter of resignation to the Washington Chests's executive committee revealed that on May 8 he expressed his intention of quitting the directorship "at whatever time seemed appropriate."

"I now ask that my resignation become effective June 30 because on July 1, When Mr. Keyes becomes executive director of the Community Chest Federation, the composite position that I have held will cease to exist and there will be no clearly defined position of Chest Director and no salary exists for that position," said his letter, dated June 16.

Joining the Washington Community Chest in December, 1930, as organizer and head of the Government unit, Willett became director in 1934. He was instrumental in organization of the Community War Fund in 1942 and the Community Chest Federation in 1946. The Chests of suburban Maryland and Virginia are members of the federation, along with the District proper.

"Herbert Willett has accomplished an extraordinary amount of difficult work for the City of Washington," Lee D. Butler, president of the Washington Community Chest, said.

"He took the job during the most trying days of the depression and when war came he set an example for us all with his driving energy, his complete determination to do the best job possible and his sacrifice of self to the general welfare of the people."

Rail Retirement Act Amendment Given Approval

By The Associated Press

A House Interstate Subcommittee yesterday approved 7 to 1 a bill limiting benefits of the Railroad Retirement Act to on-the-job sickness and accidents.

The measure, which now goes to the full committee, would cancel benefits put into the act last year for disabilities occurring while a railroad employe is not actually at work.

The legislation also cuts sharply the 3 per cent payroll tax against railroads for unemployment insurance, as long as the funds remain above 350 million dollars.

Representative Howell (R., Ill.), author of the bill, said the fund now is approximately 855 million dollars.

The new measure provides that while the fund is above 350 million dollars the tax shall be one half of 1 per cent, and shall increase gradually if the fund slides substantially below that figure. If the fund gets down to 150 million dollars or lower, the 3 per cent rate will be restored.

Marshall Fails To Block Cut in 'Voice' Funds

Secretary of State George C. Marshall met with members of the Senate Appropriations Committee in a hastily called secret session late yesterday but failed to change plans for a drastic slash in the overseas information program.

Secretary Marshall appeared before the unusual session to ask:

1. For the addition of three million dollars to a proposed 13 million dollars for the information program which includes the "Voice of America" through Russia's iron curtain.

2. Reconsideration of a committee amendment designed to force the Government to turn over its short-wave broadcasting to private networks.

Much of the discussion during the session revolved around what Senators termed "the ineptitude" with which the Government has carried on its program.

Marshall was bluntly and repeatedly advised to "get rid of" William Benton, Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs, who is in charge of the program.

Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.) told reporters that the committee had completed its action on the bill and would not revise it.

Dane Is Placed Under $1000 Bond

Carl W. Meldgaard, 33, was placed under $1000 bond yesterday on charges that he came to this country last December as a stowaway. United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage continued the case until July 8.

According to the FBI, Meldgaard admits hiding aboard the S. S. Paraguay to come here from Denmark. He had a Danish passport, but it was not visaed, the FBI charged. The passport, the FBI said, indicated that Meldgaard made numerous trips from Denmark to Germany during the occupation.

'Two Loves,' 'African Queen' Make Bette a Busy Girl

Hollywood.—It'll be Bette Davis and David Niven in "African Queen." But before Bette can do that picture she'll play in "Two Loves of Johnny Toro," written by George Sclar. It's about a 17-year-old boy who falls in love with a 30-year-old woman. What real life couple does that remind you of? . . . I see that Joe Davies says he didn't serve as liaison man to carry orders from the late President to Hollywood for the picture, "Mission to Moscow." I wonder if Mr. Davies will deny that he came here, sat on the set while the picture was being shot, and carried a portfolio which had "Mission to Moscow" written on it in a special plane to Russia. I don't believe that Jack Warner—even though he was a colonel at the time—could have arranged that little deal . . . Twentieth Century's still after Sam Wanamaker to play opposite Olivia De Havilland in "The Snake Pit."

Bette Davis

Skip Up

Greg Peck and his La Jolla Player cohorts now call themselves the Actor's company. They open July 8, with Dame May Whitty and Tom Drake in "Night Must Fall." The second play will be "Dear Ruth," with Guy Madison and Diana Lynn. Hey! Where are those big star names who were supposed to appear in those plays at La Jolla? . . . Emily Kimbrough was rushed to the Santa Monica hospital after taking suddenly ill with pneumonia. But she's well on the mend . . . Hedy Lamarr doesn't know anything about John Loder's reported leg operation. She didn't bring him home from the hospital; John's not living at her home. However, he did spend Sunday there, and took Hedy's adopted son back to school. But there's no reconciliation . . . Mayor Kennelly of Chicago will be a visitor here within the month. I think our town will be mighty impressed with him, too. I know I was.

All Set for Next

Don Ameche's excited about his new radio show for next season. It'll be written and directed by Phil Rapp and will feature the top tune of the week and the band leader who made the recording of it. Frank Morgan and Frances Langford will be on the show with Don. Sounds good . . . I've just learned that the husband of one of our top stars had his legion of merit medal snatched away when it was learned that he wasn't an American citizen—though a major—during the war. He has since become a citizen . . . Omar Kiam is in town for a month's rest before returning to New York to join in the fashion battle lines. Whether the American women will go back to the old slogan—"Shoulder lines without pads"—remains to be seen. Such would make the hips look twice as large and give one that droopy look. And long skirts would hide the best looking legs in the world.

Recommended

"Cynthia," starring Elizabeth Taylor, Mary Astor and George Murphy, is a charming picture of young love with a refreshing adult viewpoint. It has none of that silly business of father skidding across the front hall on roller skates for laughs. The kids are nicely mannered, believable ones. Bob Leonard, the director, and Eddie Knopf, the producer, are to be congratulated. The film isn't an epic, but it's mighty interesting . . . I dined with Joan Fontaine and Bill Dozier over the weekend. Joan's still talking of doing "B. F.'s Daughter" at Metro, but she's signed no contract . . . I've learned that Madge Kennedy, famous stage and silent screen star, is making her home here. That should give some bright producer the idea of casting her as a gracious mother in one of our films. I made pictures with Madge at Fort Lee, N. J., when Mary Garden was screening "Thais." At that time Mary begged Madge to do the opera, "Louise" . . . Richard Ney, although he hasn't been invited, would be mighty happy to make a couple of pictures in England. My guess is that he'll be pleased to make pictures here, too.

Blends Art With Acting

Hollywood.—John Mills, talented British actor sharing star billing with Valerie Hobson in Universal-International's release of "Great Expectations," is somewhat of an artist as well as a top luminary in the screen world.

THAT WILL BE FOUR BUCKS, PLEASE: If Catherine McLeod and Don Ameche insist on taking a horse around with them, their fare ought to go up! What gives with this trio you'll find in "That's My Man," opening this morning at the Earle

Sound Track Hobbles Renoir

'Woman on the Beach' A Memorable Portrait But Failure as Story

By Richard L. Coe

BECAUSE IT IS NOT a completely successful film and its reasoning is curiously fuzzy, "The Woman on the Beach" probably will not satisfy most of Keith's customers this week. But this reporter is emphatically with the minority who will admire it.

It is an adult story of two men and a woman, made fascinating, for all its flaws, by the direction of Jean Renoir, who made the superb "Grand Illusion." He never has quite duplicated his French successes in Hollywood, although his screen credits there have included "Swamp Water" and "The Southerner."

Joan Bennett

One of the most telling flaws of "The Woman on the Beach" is that its characters talk. Had their mundane words been replaced by the audience's imagination, what a superb story in pictures this might have been. Certain twists in the story are unconvincing, particularly its feeble conclusion, but it is essentially a moving picture and not a series of set scenes with spoken captions. Ever since pictures learned to talk, their primary function has suffered.

The most powerful of Renoir's three characters is a painter who has lost his sight. Until then he had been a respected artist, a boisterous fellow, probably, filled with rough, animal spirits. Now he is bitter, torturing himself by hoarding his paintings and thinking of them as his lost sight. He lives in a lonely beach house with his wife, of whose freedom and beauty he is increasingly jealous. Charles Bickford makes him a memorable character.

Evil and Good

The wife is less clearly realized, probably more through the fault of the script than the playing of Joan Bennett. It was she who, in a drunken brawl, threw the drinking glass which cost her husband his sight. One wonders too much about her; is she at heart the tramp she calls herself or has she become the evil, lustful woman she appears as a result of her husband's plight? Whichever, she is evil.

Completing the trio is a good man, a quiet Coast Guard lieutenant, stationed just down the beach and engaged to marry a healthily untroubled girl. His war experiences have shattered his nerves and haunt his sleep. When he comes upon the lonely wife he is physically attracted.

He imagines the husband is not really blind, but pretends to be to hold his beautiful wife. Once he leads him to a cliff to test the painter's sight. When the painter fall off, he is convinced but not cured. He takes the blind man out fishing, determined to set the wife free. Robert Ryan does the role well, but, again, the things he is required to do don't always jell.

Inconclusive Scenes

The scene at the cliff is excitingly handled and promises conclusive action that never is resolved. Going out in the boat serves only a melodramatic purpose, nor does the painter's burning of his work actually satisfy one that any of the trio's problems are solved.

What makes the picture compelling is Renoir's ability to get under the skin of his characters. One gets to know these three intimately and apart from the demands the story-teller makes of them. The loneliness of the beach, the realism of setting—the Coast Guard Station, the painter's home and the wreck of a ship by the sea—are beautifully moody, as are the seascapes and Ryan's dreamworld.

Yes, its failures in the story line and fuzziness of motivations keep it from achieving its full effect, but for all that it's a fascinating picture.

"THE WOMAN ON THE BEACH." RKO Radio release produced by Jack J. Gross. Screenplay by Frank Davis and Jean Renoir from a novel by Mitchell Wilson. "None So Blind." Directed by Renoir. At Keith's Theater.

Not Pay Dirt

Hollywood.—John Wayne has grub-staked half a dozen gold prospectors since he has been on location at Lone Pine in the High Sierras for RKO-Radio's "Tycoon." He has been helping these old-timers for years, but is still waiting for one of the prospectors to strike it rich.

Rooney Stand-in Back

Hollywood — Mickey Rooney's close friend, Sig Frohlich, has given up his importing business in New York to return to the job he held for six years before the war as Mickey Rooney's stand-in. He will rejoin the star with the start of "Killer McCoy." Frohlich first became Mickey's stand-in in 1937 and continued until 1943 when he entered the Army.

Star Sets Toil Record

Hollywood.—Robert Cummings established a new record for himself in Walter Wanger's "The Lost Moment," which co-stars Susan Hayward. He worked every day in the picture during its entire shooting schedule.

Ann Blyth 'Reforms'

Hollywood.—Ann Blyth, now 18, is identified as a screen brat through her fine performances in "Mildred Pierce" and "Swell Guy." In "Brute Force," she is a good girl for the first time in nearly three years. "It feels grand, even smug, to be respectable again," Ann says.

Actress Is Linguist

Hollywood.—Linda Christian, now appearing in "Tarzan and the Mermaids," a Sol Lesser production, speaks fluent Spanish, German, Arabic, Italian, French and Dutch in addition to English. She was educated in Mexico, Switzerland, Paris, South Africa, Holland and Italy.

Leonard Lyons

Orson Wasn't Acting But Played Part Well

New York.—A veteran Broadway producer went to Hollywood to set up a new enterprise and arrange for the financing. One day a banker was to call at his house. William Randolph Hearst promised to be there too . . . The producer suddenly realized that Orson Welles had said he would come for a visit that day and that a Hearst-Welles meeting would be fatal to his plans. He therefore sent his butler and valet to the driveways and entrances to stop Welles and send him away. Then he waited . . . Mr. Hearst arrived, but no banker . . . Later that night Welles phoned to apologize for not having come. The puzzled producer checked with his valet and butler. He discovered that the man they had stopped at the driveway and sent away was not Welles, but the banker.

Princess Margaret

John Barkham, who was in South Africa during the royal tour, reveals this story: When the King and Queen and the Princesses stopped at one city, the municipal officials gave a garden party in their honor . . . South Africans rarely curtsey, but the mayoress of the city—an ultrastout woman—decided to curtsey. Because of her unusual weight she toppled over backwards . . . King George and Queen Elizabeth retained their royal composure. Princess Elizabeth averted her gaze. But Princess Margaret laughed . . . The next day Margaret was disciplined by being confined to quarters, and a press release was issued explaining her "cold."

Howard Fast, one of the members of the committee indicted for refusing to open its books to the House Committee on Un-American Affairs, is the author of historical novels about the Revolutionary and Civil Wars. He worked for OWI, and when an investigator asked one of his friends: "What are Fast's politics?" the answer was: "Fast is a Whig" . . . The members of the Duke family who organized Duke, Intl., a movie company, selected for their corporate design a figure of the world draped with tobacco leaves . . . The Steinbeck-Capa book about their trip to Russia will be called "The Story of a Russian Village."

Secretary W. Averell Harriman, who was one of Yale's best known oarsmen, flew to the Yale-Harvard boat races, followed the Combination race while sitting in the coach's launch, and then flew back to Washington before the Varsity race. He had just come to see Harry Whitney making his debut as a crewman, rowing No. 3 for Yale in the Combination race, which Yale won. Whitney is Harriman's stepson . . . Zero Mostel will play Moliere in summer stock at Ithaca . . . Mostel, incidentally, has become a fashion-plate ever since he arrived for work at a Detroit night club and the proprietor asked him: "Where's the meat?"

The current installment of Jim Farley's magazine series on his break with Roosevelt tells of the President's purge campaign. Senators Gillette, Smith, Tydings, George, Van Nuys, Clark, McCarran, Adams and Lonergan and Representatives Cox and Smith, who were marked for purging, all won despite the President's opposition . . . But Mr. Farley doesn't mention Representative John J. O'Connor of New York, the bitterest of the anti-Roosevelt Democrats. He, too, was marked for purging—and Roosevelt found solace in O'Connor's defeat. "We had a bad season," said the Harvard-educated President, studying the purge results—then he pointed to O'Connor's name and laughed, "But we won the Yale game."

Ernest Hemingway's 18-year-old son, "Mousie," who is one of America's best rifle shooters, is recuperating in Havana from a brain concussion suffered in an auto crash . . . Jennifer Jones, who went into hiding at the Griswold Country Club recently, to sit for a portrait by Robert Brackman, emerged to discover that a convention of Connecticut dentists was being held there. The awards committee thereupon notified the screen star that she had been selected "The Girl Who Brings Out the Enamel in Men."

T. J. Watson Heads Christian Committee for Jewish Appeal

The appointment of Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corp., as chairman of the National Christian Committee for the United Jewish Appeal was announced yesterday in New York.

The United Jewish Appeal seeks 170 million dollars in a Nation-wide drive to help provide for the relief, rehabilitation and resettlement of 1,500,000 homeless Jews in Europe.

In accepting the appointment, Watson, former president of the International Chamber of Commerce, told Henry Morgenthau, jr., general chairman of the drive: "Resettlement of the homeless Jews of Europe is a paramount problem that is closely related to the well-being of all men. It also is elementary justice that those who suffered as a result of the recent war should be helped to regain their former status as productive citizens."

The National Christian Committee headed by Watson consists of 120 prominent leaders in Government, business, religion, education, science and art.

It is the first occasion in the history of the United Jewish Appeal that a national organization of Christians has been formed to support its campaign for aid to Jewish victims of war and persecution overseas.

Club Federation Votes Down Stratton Bill Indorsement

By Genevieve Reynolds
Post Reporter

New York, June 25.—Members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, in annual convention here, today voted down a resolution supporting passage of the Stratton bill to admit 400,000 displaced persons to the United States in the next four years.

The vote was 561 to 341, despite sponsorship by Federation President Mrs. Lafell Dickinson, and the unopposed candidate to succeed her, Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, of Richmond, Va.

Drawn up by Mrs. Wiley

The resolution was drawn up by Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley of the District of Columbia, national legislative chairman, to indorse principles of the bill now pending in Congress. The bill would permit entry of the displaced persons to fil unused quotas of the war years.

"It was I, as a member of the resolutions committee who prepared the resolution on displaced persons," explained Mrs. Winley. "It is based on facts and figures. When Mrs. Dickinson said, 'We are our brothers' keeper,' this resolution was the answer to her challenge."

D. C. Vote Is Split

The 17 members of the District delegation split their votes on the resolution, but only Mrs. Wi ey expressed a viewpoint during the early morning session.

Illinois' delegation were the strongest and most vociferous opponents of the resolution, forming a solid block against it. Miss Paquita Rabell of Opa Locka, Fla., however, led the opposition. "I firmly believe charity begins at home," she opined. "How can we women of America open our gates so that strangers may come in? Already over 14,000 mostly veterans, are unemployed in Miami."

Speaking for the resolution, Mrs. Touborg Jensen of Copenhagen, Denmark, pointed out that Denmark has taken in 299,000 displaced persons recently. "Danes have suffered so much that they have felt it a point of honor to do the best they could. They didn't want the displaced persons to feel that the Danish people are that element which brought on the war."

17 Nations Send Greetings

During the foreign and territorial club luncheon today, presided over by Mrs. Ruth Keslo Renfrow of Washington, 25 foreign delegates from 17 countries brought greetings. Mrs. Carlos Romulo, wife of the Philippine U. N. delegate, was another District resident present as was Mrs. Erich Schwartze.

At the morning session today Diane Ritnour of Anacostia, who represented the D. C. Allied Youth spoke on a junior panel, "What can we do about the American home."

Miss Ritnour explained that Allied Youth stands for "the liberation through education of the individual and society from the handicap of beverage."

"American women are just beginning to wake up to the idea that there's another war in the offing," declared Mrs. Blair Buck, Virginia, first vice president and unopposed candidate for the presidency in an interview.

She pointed out that the "gentler sex" had considered the United Nations the Maginot peace line and thought by supporting the U.N. they could retire to their homes. "Suddenly women are beginning to realize that they themselves must step up and do a job."

Wanderlust

2-Year-Old And Dog Run Afoul of Law

An Arlington 2-year-old and his dog got the urge to ramble yesterday and ran afoul of the law.

Held briefly for "investigation" by Arlington police yesterday were Michael Rogers and his collie, Sandy, who strayed from their home at 1504 N. Highland st.

According to Mrs. Rogers, the boy had been left with neighbors about 1:30 p. m. yesterday. Policeman William E. Clayborn found him at the corner of Wilson blvd. and N. Highland st. later.

Mike's sister, 12-year-old Pat, said it wasn't his first ramble. "He's always running away," she said gloomily.

Lanham Park Broker Jailed In Fraud Case

A Lanham Park, Md., real estate broker, indicted by a Federal grand jury in Louisville, Ky., on charge of conspiring to defraud the Government, was being held in the Bethesda Jail last night.

The FBI identified him as Joseph E. K. MacLoane, 52, and said he was arrested late Tuesday night at his home, 114 Washington ave., Lanham Park.

United States Commissioner F. Archie Meatyard, jr., at Bethesda, set MacLoane's bond at $10,000 after continuing his hearing until next Monday to allow time for a copy of the indictment to be sent from Louisville.

The FBI said the case involved MacLoane and three Louisville men, all of whome are in the construction business.

The indictment charges, according to the FBI, that MacLoane, while employed by the RFC from September, 1945, to March, 1946, at the Indiana Ordnance Works, Charleston, Ind., tipped off his three Louisville associates when the ordnance works was ready to issue bids.

MacLoane is also accused of withholding certain bids and altering others so that his three alleged co-conspirators were able to buy building materials at a low cost.

The FBI also said that MacLoane, after leaving the RFC, was employed by the War Assets Administration in Louisville.

FBI agents at the Bethesda jail told reporters that October 13 has been set as the trial date in Louisville for MacLoane and the other three men named in the indictment.

Jimmy Doyle Dies of Ring Injuries

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

THERE'S A "DAY" programmed for Cecil Travis at Griffith Stadium in July at which the bench-warming third baseman of the Nats will be called to home plate to stand about shyly while his admirers say nice things and present him with a testimonial gift.

POVICH

It couldn't happen to a nicer fellow, but it could have happened at a happier time for Travis. For the first time in his big league career he isn't a regular, and he's turning a wistful ear toward the call of his Riverdale, Ga., farm. In any of 10 other seasons, the Travis Day sponsors could have introduced him as a .300 hitter with a lifetime average of .318. Today he's hitting .193.

From the day he broke into the big leagues, on a September afternoon in 1933, it was known he could hit. That day he pounded out four hits against Cleveland pitching in Griffith Stadium, and if there was any suspicion they were lucky blows it vanished during the next six years when Travis never batted less than .317. In 1940, the Tigers tried to buy him for $150,000.

THE WAR DEALT pretty harshly with Travis. Aside from depriving him of at least $70,000 in earning capacity during the four years he spent in the Army he came out of the Battle of the Bulge with frozen feet, and never did regain all of the bounce so essential to an infielder, but worse than that, his batting stroke wasn't the same good one when he rejoined the Nats late in 1945.

They've always said for years that the good hitters pass out because their legs fail thme, but in Travis' case his legs came back well enonugh, though his batting swing didn't. What bogged Travis down is the same failing that afflicted Ruth, Simmons, Foxx, Gehrig, and other good hitters—the inability to whip their bats with the same high speed. They don't hit the same kind of pitches they used to murder. You never saw a good hitter with a slow swing, did you?

Travis was always known as a late-swinger, anyway. That's why he got so many hits to left field, and he had to slip only a fraction to find himself in a slump. Certainly in Travis' case it's no mental complex. The fellow never bothered about complexes at any point in his career.

ONE DAY BACK in the mid-thirties, Travis was hit on the head by a fast ball pitched by Thornton Lee, then with Cleveland. As he slumped to the ground, it appeared to be at least a skull fracture. It wasn't, but Travis spent three weeks in Georgetown Hospital for observation and treatment. Two days after his discharge he was back in the Nats' lineup.

The fear was that Travis would be plate-shy when he returned to action. As it happened, his first appearance was against Cleveland, with Thornton Lee, of all people, again pitching. Travis was so plate-shy that he whaled Lee's first pitch to him into right center for a triple. Manager Bucky Harris commented, "He's so plate-shy he's crowding the plate."

The only occasion on which Harris found fault with Travis was back in 1935 when the veteran pitcher, Earl Whitehill, was complaining of Travis' misplays at third base when he was pitching. Whitehill was ragging the rookie and Harris took Travis aside to give him this advice: "Don't take it from the big stiff. Punch him in the nose, and I'll back you up."

TRAVIS DEVELOPED into one of the league's better shortstops just before the war broke, despite the fact that he took a beating at the position. Without the natural reflexes of an infielder, and unable to protect himself with the nimbleness of other shortstops, Travis was the most-spiked infielder in the league but he never raised a murmur.

He was the second leading hitter in the league in 1941, yet lost the batting championship to Ted Williams by 47 points. That was the year when Travis hit .359, and Williams out in front with .406. Travis lead the league in hits, however, with 218 and became one of the few Washington players in history to drive in more than 100 runs.

Perhaps the most significant tribute to Travis was made by Bill McGowan a few years back. "He's the favorite ballplayer of the umpires," said McGowan. "He hasn't squawked yet on a called strike or any decision against him anywhere. He's the only ballplayer I ever felt sorry about calling out."

Bobo to Hurl As Nats Face Bosox Here

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats move into higher American League society starting tonight, and happy to take their chances against first division commany after rude treatment by the lowlife White Sox.

They open a three-game series with the second-place Red Sox tonight, meet the first-place Yankees in a double header Sunday, and then move against the third-place Athletics, and Manager Ossie Bluege is quite elated by the prospect.

"We're glad to see anybody except the White Sox," said Bluege, "Even the clubs that are leading the league. It's easy to understand, after the White Sox lick us 10 times in 11 games."

Newsom Goes Tonight

Tonight, Buck Newsom goes against the Red Sox whose pitching choice is uncertain after their double header with Detroit yesterday. Newsom, who hasn't pitched bad ball, hasn't been pitching winning ball, either, but Bluege still rates him a starting pitcher.

The Red Sox, knocked out of the lead by the Yankees last week, trace most of their troubles to weak pitching though they got a lift from Denny Galehouse, recent acquisition from the Browns, who will pitch in one of the games here.

Manager Joe Cronin will be showing off his new first baseman, Murrell Jones, obtained from Chicago in the Rudy York swap. Jones broke in impressively with Boston with home runs in his first two games, but hasn't hit one since.

Hold Edge Over Bosox

In contrast to the Nats' horrible time with the White Sox, they won eight and lost only nine against the three top teams, and hold a 3-2 edge over the Red Sox. "We'd be up there battling for the lead if we could have broken even with Chicago," lamented Bluege.

Bluege points out that Mickey Vernon may be on the verge of ending his batting slump . . . "He's meeting the ball better in the last week, and has been downright unlucky in getting line drives caught" . . . A recent survey of the Nats' farm teams shows only Ted Petroskey, Chattanooga shortstop, as likely talent for the Washington club . . . The Nats, once top-heavy with left-handed hitters in their batting order, now present five right-handed hitters against left-handed pitching . . . Buddy Lewis is still showing the effects of his back injury, according to Bluege, and isn't swinging with his accustomed vigor.

District Welcomes Open Champ Worsham Today

WASHINGTON'S favorite golfer comes home to a fitting welcome today.

Lugging the huge trophy emblematic of his National Open championship, Lew Worsham, former Chevy Chase, Burning Tree and Congressional professional, will step from a train at Union Station and plunge into ceremonies capped by a dinner at Congressional Country Club tonight.

In charge of the committee of golfers and Worsham fans who will honor the first National Open title winner of Washington it Wash B. Williams. He will officiate as a motor parade forms on F st. ne., near Union Station at 8:30 this morning.

At 9:05 the parade, with police escort, will leave the station and go Pennsylvania ave. to the District Building. There Worsham will receive tribute for his golf triumph from the Board of Commissioners.

At tonight's testimonial dinner Worsham's family will be guests of honor and as a climax Worsham, who defeated Sammy Snead in a playoff for the Open crown, will be presented a Cadillac.

Kapilow Due Here Today For Workouts

Danny Kapilow reports here this morning to complete preparation for his 10-round bout with Smuggy Hursey at Griffith Stadium Tuesday night.

Today at 2 p. m., Kapilow, Hursey and their managers are to appear before the District of Columbia Boxing Commission to post $1000 forfeits as a guarantee they will make 155 pounds for the test. Immediately afterward they are to open doubleheader public workouts at the Liberty A. C. gymnasium when Smuggy swings into action at 2:30 p. m. and Danny an hour later.

The 26-year-old Kapilow, Manager Al Weill predicts, will test Hursey as he has never been tested here previously. Danny won a hard fought eight round decision over Smuggy here two years ago, and scored a stunning three round knockout over Aaron Perry last summer.

Kapilow's prowess as a puncher is disclosed in his one-round knockout of Gene Burton, conqueror of Ike Williams and twice winner over Johnny Bratton, as well as short-order kayoes of Henry Jordan and Perry. He also dropped Sammy Angott, former world's lightweight champion, twice in a bristling bout here two years ago, only to lose a split decision that was vigorously protested.

Danny also holds decisions over Sheik Rangel, Dorsey Lay, Wesley Mouzon, George (Red) Doty, Verne Patterson, Solomon Stewart, Ray Rovelli, Freddie Archer and Steve Riggio and has boxed draws with Archer, Rocky Graziano, Bobby Lakin, Willie Joyce and Vinnie Rossano.

A heavy advance ticket sale for Kapilow and Hursey is in progress at the Liberty A. C. and at Griffith Stadium. General admission seats priced at $2.50 each are being made available today.

Ingram to Draft Future A.-A. Slate

Baltimore, June 25 (AP).—Speeding through their business in an effort to adjourn by tonight, All-America Football Conference heads today tackled such items as proposed rule changes, schedule-making and exhibition games.

It was announced that in the future Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, conference commissioner, would draft the schedule for the eight professional outfits, and present it to the annual New York meeting in January.

Ingram announced that the teams had signed 436 of the 449 players they expect to take to training camp starting next month.

Tigers Snap Losses; Split With Bosox

Boston, June 25 (AP).—Lefty Hal Newhouser won his seventh game of the season and the Detroit Tigers ended a winless streak at 10 games today by beating the Boston Red Sox, 4-2, in the opener of a doubleheader but the defending American League champions bounced back to take the second contest, 4-3, behind Dave Ferriss who won his seventh.

The Tigers hopped on starter Tex Hughson for three runs, which would have been enough to win, in the opener's fourth inning.

Pat Mullin's single, Georgie Kell's double, Eddie Mayo's infield basehit, a right field double by former Red Sox Catcher Hal Wagner and Newhouser's long fly out to center accounted for the three scores.

The Sox made their two runs of the first game in the sixth after the Tigers had scored their fourth in the fifth frame.

Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr and Dom DiMaggio singled and Jake Jones doubled. After that Newhouser closed the door.

Neither side could get more than six hits in the afterpiece which the Tigers started by getting a run in the opening inning on two walks, a single and an infield out.

They added their others in the fifth which Dizzy Trout, who lost his fifth against six victories, started with a single. After two were out Roy Cullenbine pulled his sixth home run of the season into the Sox bull pen in right field.

Johnny Pesky's single, William's seventy-seventh base on balls of the season, Sam Mele's right field safety and Bobby Doerr's flyout to right gave the Sox two runs in the first.

Bulla was one stroke back with 140 for 36 holes.

Bulla, the only American in the tournament, took a seven on the first hole when his tee shot dropped behind a tree but he hammered out nine threes in improving on his opening round 71.

BEFORE THE FIGHT—Jimmy Doyle of Los Angeles, who died yesterday of head injuries received Tuesday night when he lost by a technical knockout to Welterweight Champion Ray Robinson, shakes hands with Robinson shortly after the two weighed in for the title bout

Doyle's Death Is Fourth In Boxing Rings This Year

New York, June 25 (AP).—Jimmy Doyle's death in Cleveland today, less than 24 hours after the California challenger's technical knockout by Welterweight Champion Ray Robinson, was the fourth boxing fatality in the United States since January 1, but the first this year in a professional ring.

The death, caused by head injuries received when Doyle went down in the eighth round, was the first ever to result from a world championship fight.

Travis Hudson, a 17-year-old boy from West Monroe, La., died in the dressing room at Shreveport, La., January 3, during an intercity amateur card.

At Ridgewood Grove in Brooklyn on January 29, Tony Sconzo of New York died of a cerebral hemorrhage after a knockout in an amateur bout.

J. T. Horton of the United States Navy died March 27 at Long Beach, Calif., of a cerebral hemorrhage after an amateur Navy contest.

There were 11 ring deaths during 1946, including Professionals Dave Mason of Cleveland, Nat Hines of Philadelphia, Harvey Weiss of New York, Del Hardy of Bountiful, Utah, Bobby Burton of Pittsburgh and Billy Brown of New Brunswick, N. J.

One of the most prominent boxing fatalities was the death of Ernie Schaff after a knockout by Primo Carnera in Madison Square Garden, February 10, 1933. The Italian giant went on to win the heavyweight crown from Jack Sharkey in his next bout.

During Maxie Baer's early days in California he had stopped Frankie Campbell in the fifth round of a San Francisco bout, August 25, 1930. Campbell died after the fight.

Fall to Floor Brings Death To Robinson Kayo Victim

Cleveland, June 25 (AP).—Jimmy Doyle, a game little ring campaigner from Los Angeles, fought and lost his last battle today as he succumbed to injuries received in last night's world welterweight championship bout with Ray (Sugar) Robinson.

Death came to the 22-year-old Californian just 17 hours after he had been floored by a left hook in the eighth round of a bout he hoped would carry him to the championship.

His death marked the first time in ring history that a boxer was killed in a championship bout.

Coroner Samuel R. Gerber said Robinson would be arraigned immediately on a technical manslaughter charge, and police homicide members ordered the champion not to leave town.

Mayor Orders Investigation

Simultaneously, Mayor Thomas A. Burke demanded a full report of the fight from Andrew Puskar, chairman of the Cleveland Boxing Commission.

Every effort was made to save Doyle's life. He was operated on last night by Dr. Spencer Braden, Cleveland brain specialist, in an effort to relieve a paralysis of the respiratory center.

Dr. Braden said Doyle suffered a concussion and a blood clot which had caused a respiratory paralysis. The fighter was given oxygen and carbon dioxide continuously through a head cone at Charity Hospital.

Doyle seemingly was headed for a brilliant fistic career until he suffered head injuries in a fight with Artie Levine here March 1, 1946. He was kept out of action nine months before hitting the comeback trail that led to the title bout with Robinson.

Ring Floor Fall Blamed

Dr. Braden, however, dispelled theories that last night's injuries were related to the previous concussion. He said they were received in Doyle's fall to the ring floor.

The Californian began fighting as an 118-pound amateur at the age of 17. Tutored by former Heavyweight Champion Jack Johnson, Doyle began his career at 18 and soon became a prominent ring performer.

He was managed by Tony Palazola, his discoverer, until the latter's death last year when Pat Doyle, no relation to Jimmy, took over the managerial reins.

The fight with Robinson marked Doyle's fifty-second ring appearance and was only his sixth defeat.

Although Sugar Ray held the upper hand throughout last night, Jimmy displayed plenty of boxing prowess until the end came—the punishing left hook that knocked him out.

Doyle's head bounced off the canvas with a thud as Referee Jackie Davis prepared to start the count which was stopped at nine as the bell rang.

Funeral arrangements were to be made by Doyle's brother, Edward, who was flying to Cleveland from the West Coast.

With the young challenger when he died was Father James Nagle, chaplain of the hospital. He read prayers for the dead over the boxer's body. He administered the last sacraments last night.

Lieut. Dave Kerr of the Cleveland police homicide squad said that he examined the ring to determine if there was any faulty construction.

"I could find nothing wrong with the ring," Kerr said.

Tep Bishop, Kunex Tie For Massachusetts Open

Belmont, Mass., June 25 (AP).—For the third straight time, the Massachusetts Open Golf Championship wound up in a deadlock when Ted Bishop, the National Amateur champion, and Gene Kunex of Englewood, N. J., a seasoned major-tournament campaigner, finished with 291 totals for the 72-hole play at Belmont Country Club.

Patty Berg Puts Open Golf Title On Line Today

Greensboro, N. C., June 25 (AP).—The country's best gal golfers, with one conspicuous exception, put the finishing practice touches on their game today for the start of the Women's National Open tomorrow, a 72-hole stroke play tussle with a $7500 pot of rogi for the ladies who play for pay.

The notable absentee was the Denver fireball, Babe Didrikson Zaharias, just winding up a successful invasion of Britain and not yet back in the United States.

Patty Berg, the red-headed Minneapolis veteran, will defend the title she won last year.

Even though the pros are out in strength, a prime favorite to win was little Louise Suggs, the Lithia Springs, Ga., amateur. She captured the Western Open at Atlanta last week from a field that included practically all of the entries here.

Rated as a strong contender was Helen Dettweiler, Indio, Calif., formerly of Washington.

Washington Canoe Club Regatta Set Sunday

The Washington Canoe Club is host Sunday at 11 a.m. to the annual American Canoe Association's annual invitation regatta for Middle Atlantic area clubs.

Among the clubs which will compete, beside the Washington Canoe Club, are Dempsey's and Potomac from the District; Inwood, N. J.; Philadelphia and Cacawa from Pennsylvania, and Yonkers and Pendleton from New York. In addition to the usual races, there will be a tilting contest.

Shea Scores 9th for Yanks

New York, June 25 (AP).—Frank Shea, sensational rookie right-hander, held the Cleveland Indians to three hits tonight in pitching the New York Yankees to a 3-0 victory. A cash crowd of 60,090 which soared the Yankees home attendance past the million mark—1,018,082—in 31 games saw the bespectacled youngster register his ninth triumph and third shutout. He has lost two.

Star Teams Appear Set

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—Fan balloting for the All-Star baseball game at Wrigley Field on July 8 today headed into the home stretch with three American and two National League clubs dominating the contest for starting assignments.

The poll, conducted by 193 newspapers, radio stations and magazines, will conclude at midnight tomorrow with at least six positions in varying degrees of doubt.

As the total vote reached 1,377,899 today, it appeared that the New York Yankees, the Boston Red Sox and the Detroit Tigers each would have two players in the starting American League line-up.

In the National League line-up, the New York Giants and the Phillies ostensibly had nailed down two berths.

Joe DiMaggio, slugging Yankee outfielder, continued to set the individual pace with 572,148 votes, followed by Outfielder Enos Slaughter of the St. Louis Cardinals with 561,736 and Ted Williams, Red Sox outfielder, with 548,512.

The fan-picked line-ups to date are:

Pro Golf Brigade Starts Money Chase Again Today

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—After two weeks of swinging, mainly for glory, in the National Open and National PGA tourneys, the professional golf brigade again will concentrate on cash collecting tomorrow through Sunday in the $15,900 Chicago Victory National Golf Championships.

Headed by newly crowned PGA Champion Jim Ferrier of San Francisco and four former Victory National winners—Sam Byrd of Detroit (1943), Ben Hogan of Hershey, Pa. (1942-41), Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kan. (1940), and Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va. (1938)—A field of 54 pros and 26 amateurs will compete in the 72-hole stroke play event.

Top professional prize is $2000, but a torrid play-for-pay workman potentially could pocket $4300 in the varied program arranged by the Chicago District Golf Charities, Inc., at the Westward Ho Club, a flat, wide-open course, whose par 71 likely will be blasted to bits by the high-powered field.

The "name" contingent will include such sharpshooters as Lloyd Mangrum, 1946 United States Open winner; Chick Harbert, runner-up to Ferrier in the PGA meet; leading money winner Jimmy Demaret; Ed (Porky) Oliver, Ed Furgol, Fred Haas, jr., Toney Penna, Ellsworth Vines, Johnny Palmer, Herman Kaiser, Gene Kunes, Clayton Heafner, Harry Todd, Henry Ransom, Jimmy Thomson, Ralph Guldahl, Skip Alexander and Lawson Little.

Among the amateurs who will shoot along with pros in 26 threesomes for pro-amateur honors will be Jimmie McHale of Chestnut Hill, Pa.; Wilford Wehrle, Louisville, Ky.; Smiley Quick, Los Angeles, Calif.; Chuck Kocsis, Royal Oak, Mich.; Al Besselink, Philadelphia, Pa.; Royal Hogan, Fort Worth, Tex.; Earl Christiansen, Los Angeles, and veteran Chick Evans of Chicago.

Baird Scores With Belle Moose in Charles Town Feature

SUES PITCHER—Kay Gidd, Chicago waitress who is asking $50,000 in a damage suit against Russ Meyer, Chicago Cubs pitcher, displays a beautiful "shiner" here. She claims Meyer pulled her hair in the Sheridan Plaza Hotel bar, after which she bit him on the nose

Apprentice Boots Home 4 Winners

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 25. Apprentice Jimmy Baird, West Chester (Pa.) boy who has only five more riding days until he graduates into a full-fledged jockey, won the Lovell Purse, featuring the Wednesday program. He was aboard E. L. Miller's Belle Moose and kept the 4-year-old filly going long enough to get home four lengths in front of Mrs. Carroll Bowers' Aldridge. In third position came E. L. Poston's White Easter.

Altogether, Baird booted in four winners today. Baird stepped the Bull Moose filly around the seven furlongs in time of 1:25 3-5. There was some question as to whether Belle Moose could go the long sprint distance and she paid $7.80 after proving her ability.

Riding feature winners is getting to be stock equipment with Baird. Tomorrow he is scheduled to pilot Golden Blaze in the James Sager Purse at 6½ furlongs.

Takes It Easy

Today it was a case of trying to catch Baird and he gave the opposition "the beard." He sprinted the filly into the lead, sat tight to the stretch and lightly urged the fleet miss into the wire while Aldridge and White Easter were being pushed to the limit.

Baird, who rode five winners yesterday, started the day on the right foot by getting W. R. Long's Blablah up in the concluding strides to win at a $10.40 mutuel. Jockey J. Beccerril piloted R. F. Duffy's Wrakfair home in the second at $11.60. Those who played the seven and four combination in the daily double, oddly enough, collected $74 mutuel.

Scores With Asaider

Baird's third winner came in the fifth event, a purse affair. He swung a leg over the Stevens Stable's Asaider and booted the Sky Raider filly home by slipping through on the inside rail entering the stretch. Asaider paid $5.60 and led Mrs. H. S. Grinder's Alarosa and Mrs. Newell Ward, jr.'s Slam Bid to the wire in time of 1:18 for the 6 furlongs plus 120 feet.

Baird rode his fourth winner of the day and his ninth winner in the last two days in the eighth race. He was aboard Mrs. L. A. Whiteley's Scotty's Own and kept the 5-year-old going long enough to win a nose decision over Worthowning. Scotty's Own paid $11.

Today was Baird's twenty-sixth birthday.

Bill Bennings Says

Dear Folks:

At Charles Town.

The chief subject of conversation hereabouts is the disqualification of New Chum, winner of the eighth race last Tuesday. The number came down because jockey Nertney weighed out at 114 pounds, four pounds less than the assigned weight. Those who lost money by the ruling are still beefing loudly and justly. However, the consensus is that, although the situation was bad, it was honestly handled. From what I can learn, Nertney stepped on the scales, was checked as O. K. and went to the paddock to ride. When he returned he was found to weigh 114 pounds. Apparently there were no lead pads involved. Considering that the clerk of scales made a mistake, it must have been an honest one. He could have kept quiet. Instead, he announced loudly when Nertney came on the scales that his weight was short. Nertney hardly could have been trying to pull a fast one, because it was a cinch the clerk of scales would have discovered the deficiency. Of course all this doesn't help those who wagered on New Chum. However, those who bet other horses were at a disadvantage because four additional pounds might have made New Chum a loser. It took a lot of courage for all concerned to make a disqualification. The easy way out would have been to wink and let the whole thing pass. Unfortunate—not tactfully handled—but honestly dealt with, that's how I look at it... See you on the rail... Bill.

Chisox's Haynes Out With Inflamed Nerve

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—Joe Haynes, right handed pitcher with the Chicago White Sox, will be lost to the team for five days because of an inflamed nerve in his back.

Manager Ted Lyons advised from Cleveland today that Haynes remained in Washington to undergo treatment from Dr. Edward Larkin, a nerve specialist. It was first thought that Haynes, who pitched three runless innings in Philadelphia last Sunday before retiring, was suffering from a cold in his right shoulder.

Cubs Held In Check by Dave Koslo

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—The New York Giants ended their second swing through the West today by trouncing the Chicago Cubs, 9-3, to pull to within one game of the idle league-leading Boston Braves.

Home runs by Walker Cooper, Willard Marshall and Johnny Mize paced the Giants' 11-hit attack against Johnny Schmitz, Hooks Wyse, and Paul Erickson.

Mize's blow in the ninth with one on was his ninteenth of the season. Cooper and Marshall's drives were the fourteenth for each, the highest output for both in a single major league season.

Cooper's blow, a three-run jolt in the first inning, was his fifth in his last four games and his eleventh of the month.

Only four of the Giants' runs were earned as the Cubs committed four errors in dropping their second in a row to the Polo grounders.

Lefty Dave Koslo went the route for the Giants to gain his seventh win. The cagy southpaw was in serious trouble only in the fifth when the Cubs scored all of their runs on four hits.

Queen Mary Sees Brown, Patty Upset at Wimbledon

Wimbledon, Eng., June 25 (U.P.).—Eighty-year-old Queen Mary made her first appearance in the royal box at Wimbledon today in time to see the first upset of the All-England tennis championships as an inspired empire doubles team whipped Tom Brown of San Francisco and Budge Patty of Los Angeles, seeded fourth in the doubles draw.

Rallying in the final set, Tony Mottram of Britain and Young Billy Sidwell, rising Australian Davis Cup candidate, dealt the powerful American contingent at Wimbledon its first major blow by thumping Brown and Patty, 6—2, 2—6, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4.

Queen Mary, unperturbed as spectators behind her frantically quenched a fire in a canvas backdrop during an earlier match, was as excited as the rest of the gallery of 15,000 and clenched her hands continually until Sidwell's bold volleying cracked the Americans.

Other favored Americans, however, progressed en masse along with seeded players in all divisions.

Jack Kramer of Los Angeles and Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, top-seeded in the doubles, whipped M. D. Deloford and N. R. Lewis of England, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3, hitting their peak in the third set which required only 13 minutes. They obviously were off form in the first set, but the Britons were worse.

Doris Hart of Miami, seeded third, and Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of Lajolla, Calif., seeded fourth, joined two other Americans in the third round of women's singles with impressive victories of different nature as the women's field was brought to the last 32. Top-seeded Margaret Osborne of San Francisco and Louis Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., seeded second, reached the third round yesterday.

All the other "big" teams in men's doubles followed Kramer and Falkenburg into the second round, including John Bromwich and Dinny Pails of Ausralia, seeded second; Jaroslav Drobny and Valdimir Cernik of Czechoslovakia; Pierre Pellizza and Yvon Petra of France and the South American team of Enrique Morea, Argentina, and Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Ecuador.

Yankees Buy Frey From Chicago Cub

New York, June 25 (AP).—The New York Yankees today announced the purchase of infielder Linus (Lonnie) Frey from the Chicago Cubs for an undisclosed amount in a straight cash deal.

A left-handed hitter, Frey batted .256 with the Cincinnati Reds last season while appearing in 111 games as a second baseman. He was bought early this year by the Cubs, who had sold him to the Reds in 1938.

Frey will report to the Yankees as soon as possible, the club said.

Dodgers Beat Pirates, 6 to 2

Pittsburgh, June 25 (INS).—Third Baseman Johnny Jorgensen drove in five runs with a single, double and triple today to lead the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 6-tb-2 victory over the last place Pittsburgh Pirates.

Jorgenson singled home Jackie Robinson and Dixie Walker in the fourth, and clinched the game with a three-run double to left in the eighth.

Harry Taylor, rookie Dodger pitcher, doled out seven hits, among them Eddie Basinski's fourth homerun of the year, to chalk up his fifth triumph.

Comeback Against Curves

Trippi Gets Off Bench to Hit .365

Atlanta, Ga., June 25 (U.P.).—Benched for weak stickwork two months ago, chunky Charley Trippi came back to paste Southern ssociation pitching for a .365 mark and the big league scouts were camped anew on the golden boy's doorstep today.

Trippi

They said the Georgia gridiron great couldn't hit curves, and the first time around he saw nothing but the pretzel pitch. As it turned out, the diamond jockeys were right. Trippi was a sucker for the bender.

But Atlanta pilot Kiki Cuyler, who can be a persistent fellow where a ballplayer is involved, didn't give up. The former Chicago Cub star star benched Trippi, changed his stance at the plate and taught him to wait and take his cut after the hook broke.

Cuyler had Trippi down in his book as a natural athlete . . . a fellow who could take coaching.

The stocky Sicilian kept smiling. He turned aside all questions about his hitting.

"I'm not worried," Trippi said, pointing to Cuyler, "as long as the boss isn't."

When he returned to the lineup the lessons started paying off immediately. Trippi was meeting the ball solidly. And when he didn't, his tremendous speed afoot helped him beat out taps to the infield.

Then Cuyler moved him over to right from center field.

"He's got to learn to get the ball away fast. He'll get the hang of it. But it'll be less costly to the Crackers if he learns while he's playing right field."

A recent wave of injuries on the Atlanta nine forced a general shakeup in the team. Cuyler moved Trippi in to third base, and the Pittstown, Pa., performer was more than adequate during the emergency tour at the hot corner.

The scouts, who have been watching the 24-year-old speedster like a hawk for the past few weeks, no longer question his hitting. They marvel at his mercurial touches afield and on the basepaths. And they think, along with Cuyler, that his throwing will come along.

Right now Trippi is committed to reporting to the Chicago Cardinals in August for his freshman year of pro football on a $100,000 contract.

But Charley is smart. He knows he can last longer playing baseball than bucking the line, and for a shot at the majors he'd forego the gridiron.

Atlanta Club President Earl Mann's "All American out" of only two months ago appears to be the most valuable baseball property among Dixieland diamond operatives today.

And Mann might have to reserve an entire section for the ivory hunters descending upon Atlanta to watch Charley murder those curves.

Cubs Held In Check by Dave Koslo

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—The New York Giants ended their second swing through the West today by trouncing the Chicago Cubs, 9-3, to pull to within one game of the idle league-leading Boston Braves.

Home runs by Walker Cooper, Willard Marshall and Johnny Mize paced the Giants' 11-hit attack against Johnny Schmitz, Hooks Wyse, and Paul Erickson.

Mize's blow in the ninth with one on was his ninteenth of the season. Cooper and Marshall's drives were the fourteenth for each, the highest output for both in a single major league season.

Cooper's blow, a three-run jolt in the first inning, was his fifth in his last four games and his eleventh of the month.

Only four of the Giants' runs were earned as the Cubs committed four errors in dropping their second in a row to the Polo grounders.

Lefty Dave Koslo went the route for the Giants to gain his seventh win. The cagy southpaw was in serious trouble only in the fifth when the Cubs scored all of their runs on four hits.

Queen Mary Sees Brown, Patty Upset at Wimbledon

Wimbledon, Eng., June 25 (U.P.).—Eighty-year-old Queen Mary made her first appearance in the royal box at Wimbledon today in time to see the first upset of the All-England tennis championships as an inspired empire doubles team whipped Tom Brown of San Francisco and Budge Patty of Los Angeles, seeded fourth in the doubles draw.

Rallying in the final set, Tony Mottram of Britain and Young Billy Sidwell, rising Australian Davis Cup candidate, dealt the powerful American contingent at Wimbledon its first major blow by thumping Brown and Patty, 6—2, 2—6, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4.

Queen Mary, unperturbed as spectators behind her frantically quenched a fire in a canvas backdrop during an earlier match, was as excited as the rest of the gallery of 15,000 and clenched her hands continually until Sidwell's bold volleying cracked the Americans.

Other favored Americans, however, progressed en masse along with seeded players in all divisions.

Jack Kramer of Los Angeles and Bob Falkenburg of Hollywood, top-seeded in the doubles, whipped M. D. Deloford and N. R. Lewis of England, 6—1, 6—4, 6—3, hitting their peak in the third set which required only 13 minutes. They obviously were off form in the first set, but the Britons were worse.

Doris Hart of Miami, seeded third, and Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of Lajolla, Calif., seeded fourth, joined two other Americans in the third round of women's singles with impressive victories of different nature as the women's field was brought to the last 32. Top-seeded Margaret Osborne of San Francisco and Louis Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., seeded second, reached the third round yesterday.

All the other "big" teams in men's doubles followed Kramer and Falkenburg into the second round, including John Bromwich and Dinny Pails of Ausralia, seeded second; Jaroslav Drobny and Vaidimir Cernik of Czechoslovakia; Pierre Pellizza and Yvon Petra of France and the South American team of Enrique Morea, Argentina, and Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Ecuador.

Yankees Buy Frey From Chicago Cub

New York, June 25 (AP).—The New York Yankees today announced the purchase of infielder Linus (Lonnie) Frey from the Chicago Cubs for an undisclosed amount in a straight cash deal.

A left-handed hitter, Frey batted .256 with the Cincinnati Reds last season while appearing in 111 games as a second baseman. He was bought early this year by the Cubs, who had sold him to the Reds in 1938.

Frey will report to the Yankees as soon as possible, the club said.

Dodgers Beat Pirates, 6 to 2

Pittsburgh, June 25 (INS).—Third Baseman Johnny Jorgensen drove in five runs with a single, double and triple today to lead the Brooklyn Dodgers to a 6-to-2 victory over the last place Pittsburgh Pirates.

Jorgenson singled home Jackie Robinson and Dixie Walker in the fourth, and clinched the game with a three-run double to left in the eighth.

Harry Taylor, rookie Dodger pitcher, doled out seven hits, among them Eddie Basinski's fourth homerun of the year, to chalk up his fifth triumph.

Prince Missing In N. Y. Turns Up in Paris

Paris, June 25 (U.P.).—Iranian Prince Hamid Riza Pahlevi, 15-year-old transatlantic truant, arrived by plane today from New York and said he wasn't really playing hookey from a Rhode Island school.

Hamid-Riza

"I just decided to take a vacation and I left," the curly-haired, smiling boy said.

But he also said he had no intention of going back to New York, where he disappeared from the Park Avenue Drake Hotel at 9:30 p. m. Monday. A legation spokesman said the prince would go back.

"I'm not returning to New York. I am returning to Iran," he said.

Hamid was wearing a dark red suit. He had managed to get his clothes out when he left his brother's hotel suite to "get the papers" Monday evening.

Though the prince listed himself as a student, he has spent considerable time, apparently, in studying how to play hookey. He previously had absented himself from a school in Beirut, Lebanon.

At Warm Springs

Bell Tower Planned at Ga. Shrine

Warm Springs, Ga., June 24 (A.P.).—The "Little White House" of President Roosevelt passed to the State of Georgia as a national shrine today.

The memorial commission to which it was deeded immediately announced plans for a bell tower memorial taller than the Washington Monument.

The mighty structure, to be known as the "Franklin D. Roosevelt Peace Tower," will be built by public subscription in the United States and abroad.

Approximately 1500 persons—celebrities from Washington, ambassadors of foreign powers, and FDR's Georgia "neighbors"—braved misting rain for the dedication. Among embassy representatives was the Russian Ambassador to the United States, Nikolai Novikov.

The unpretentious, six-room cottage, which served the late President as his "second home," was willed to the Warm Springs Foundation when he died here April 12, 1945. Now it becomes a memorial along with 3000 acres of field and forest sloping upward to "Dowdell's Knob," a flat shelf atop Pine Mountain where the President drove frequently to meditate.

President Basil O'Connor of the Warm Springs Foundation handed the deed to Gov. M. E. Thompson of Georgia.

Announcement of plans for the tower was made by Ivan Allen, chairman of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Warm Springs Memorial Commission.

Josephus Daniels, former Navy Secretary under whom Mr. Roosevelt served as Assistant Secretary in World War I and now editor and publisher of the Raleigh News and Observer, spoke, and Michael Francis Doyle, chairman of the Electoral Colleges of the United States, unveiled a bronze tablet as the ceremonies concluded. It bore a likeness of President Roosevelt in profile.

O'Connor read a letter from President Truman, commenting that "the little white cottage in which died the man who led his country to victory in the greatest war in history will become one of the sacred places of the Nation."

In addition to O'Connor and Daniels, national leaders attending the dedication included Chief Justice Fred Vinson, Associate Justice Hugo Black, Homer Cummings, Attorney General under Roosevelt; Bernard Baruch of New York, and White House Secretary William D. Hassett, special representative of President Truman.

Dr. Marshall Gets Call to Philadelphia

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church and Senate chaplain, has been offered the pastorate of a large Philadelphia congregation, it was learned last night.

Dr. Marshall

The congregation which extended him the invitation will be formed from a merger of three prominent downtown bodies in the Quaker City. They are First, Second and Chambers-Wylie churches.

Should Dr. Marshall accept, he still must be officially released from his present church by the Washington City Presbytery. The presbytery's action will be based on a vote by his congregation.

In September, 1943, Dr. Marshall accepted a call to the pulpit of Highland Park Presbyterian Church, Dallas, Tex., but his flock voted 300 to 9 to retain him. He has served his present pulpit since 1937. He was born 44 years ago in Coatbridge, Scotland, coming to America in 1927.

His nomination last January as Senate chaplain was attacked on the Senate floor by Democrats as "partisan politics." Dr. Marshall said at that time he had been naturalized as a District resident and therefore had "no political affiliations."

Curley Pleads Illness in Asking Mercy

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston yesterday threw himself on the mercy of District Court in a last-minute attempt to escape prison.

Attorneys for Curley, onetime governor of Massachusetts and former Congressman from that State, asked suspension of a 6-to-18-month jail sentence on mail fraud charges because of Curley's "most serious and precarious physical condition."

Curley, 72, arrived in Washington Tuesday night after leaving a Cohasset, Mass., hospital where he had been under treatment for diabetes and high blood pressure. He has been ordered to appear before Justice James M. Proctor this morning for committal to jail.

Defense Attorneys William E. Leahy and Nicholas J. Case moved "to suspend execution of judgment and sentence," declaring Curley "is in most serious and precarious physical condition and in light thereof the ends of justice . . . would be subserved by suspending the execution of the judgment and the sentence."

Immediately after filing the petition, defense attorneys went into a conference with Justice Proctor and U. S. Attorney George Morris Fay.

Curley, who came here despite a warning from his physician that the trip might kill him, remained in bed at his hotel and took no part in yesterday's court proceedings.

With the petition for a suspended sentence, Curley's attorneys submitted a complete medical report of his condition and a physician's opinion that he would probably suffer a fatal cerebral hemorrhage if sent to jail.

Safe Robbers Net $1500 on Wharf

With all strength and no stealth, safe robbers made a $1500 haul at the Potomac Fish Co.'s second-floor offices at 19 Municipal Wharf early yesterday.

They rolled the 200-pound strongbox across the floor, dumped it down 13 steps and pushed it out a rear door—noiselessly, so far as detection was concerned.

Police found the safe, battered open and the $1500 gone, in the unit block of 58th st. se., at noon yesterday.

Union City, N. J., June 25 (INS).—Prompt action by firemen and police today put out a fire aboard the 10,780-ton cargo ship Marine Flier at her Union City pier and averted an incipient panic among persons who feared "another Texas City disaster."

The fire, of undetermined origin, gutted two holds of the President Lines' vessel, being loaded at pier 9, at the foot of 12th street, Union City.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON: . . JUNE 1947 ...

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

War Undersecretary Kenneth C. Royall yesterday went before the Senate Civil Service Committee to defend his plan to arbitrarily fire and downgrade middle and upper grade civilian employes. He walked off the winner. No Senator asked him a penetrating question.

Kluttz

However, from Royall's own testimony, it was evident that his original plan had been watered down. War offices were first ordered to make reductions of "at least 50 per cent" in the middle and top brackets. Royall said yesterday that 25 per cent of the higher-graded jobs had been abolished by his plan.

Also, he insisted that it had been his plan from the beginning to give special consideration to scientific, intelligence, and medical personnel. That may be true, but it's also true that plans were made anyway to fire groups of these specialists, and that pressure had to be exerted to get them canceled. In fact, the department faced the loss of many of its key scientists had it gone through with some of its plans.

Royall said the objective of his plan was to "stop the tendency of taking practically all cuts in the lower grades and to make at least some progress toward a more equitable distribution of graded positions." He added it has worked out that way. The official then cited figures which tended to show the department had been overstaffed in the higher grades. He said:

That in April, 1939, there were 240 employes graded 9 through 15. In January of this year the number was 11,684. Further, he said there had been increases in the number of employes paid $7100 to $10,000 on January 1 of this year even though a 66 per cent personnel slash had been made. The number, he said, was 2581, or four times the number of uniformed generals. He added that the generals had been reduced 59 per cent from the peak.

Royall said the department had to reduce its staff by 60,000 employes and that all the employes in the four low grades would have been wiped out had the department followed the same method in making discharges. Now that the program has been carried out, Royall said it had proved to be "sound and wise."

The Undersecretary emphasized that the major layoff had been ordered by Congress. A letter from Secretary Patterson was put into the record. It said that "His (Royall's) actions have been thoroughly in accord with my decisions and wishes."

OHE: More than 1000 employes have been given layoff notices in the Office of the Housing Expediter. Most of them transferred to OHE from Civilian Production to carry on the so-called veterans' housing program.

RETURN: The Senate yesterday was asked to okay the transfer back here of nine Federal agencies with 2500 employes. The request was made by W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of Public Buildings, to a Senate subcommittee considering the independent offices appropriation bill.

The PBA head assured the group that adequate office and living space could be found here this fall and winter for the agencies and their employes. He sought approval of these transfers:

Securities and Exchange, 643 employes, and Immigration and Naturalization, 551 employes, from Philadelphia.

Fish and Wildlife, 1140 employes; National Park Service, 112, and Indian Affairs, 204, from Chicago.

The fourth regional Civil Service office from Winston-Salem, N. C. This office has 105 employes.

The Bureau of Employes Compensation, 250, and the 500 employes in Veterans Administration's actuarial insurance office, both from New York.

Reynolds made no mention of the return here of Alien Property, Federal Deposit Insurance, and several other offices that want to return.

Senator Reed (R., Kans.), subcommittee chairman, said top priority would be given to SEC. An SEC witness said the agency could operate more effectively and efficiently in this city.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION: Nominations are in order for the employe member of the board of efficiency ratings in this agency. Ray J. Abbaticchio is now the emplye member . . . Alexandria Seeks to Buy Water Plant

City Makes Offer Of $2,750,000 for Privately Owned Utility Holdings

The City of Alexandria yesterday offered to purchase the entire holdings of the privately owned Alexandria Water Company for $2,750,000.

City Manager Carl Budwesky said he made the offer on direction of Council, which voted for it in executive session Tuesday night.

Councilman Paul L. Delaney, who initiated the action, said the price was based on figures of original assets of the company and subsequent improvements. The data came from the State Corporation Commission.

If the offer is accepted, the next step would be a referendum on a bond issue to finance the purchase. This could be held either at the general election in November or in a special election designated by the Corporation Court.

If the company refuses the offer, the city may still obtain possession by condemnation. Delaney said the city charter empowers it to take over the company by condemnation at any time it sees fit.

Meanwhile, the company yesterday revealed plans for a one-million-dollar expansion calculated to double the city's daily water supply to nearly 11 million gallons within two years.

The immediate program includes installation of wells within the city, erection of a new one-million-gallon storage tank and installation of a large water main from the reservoir to the filter plant to eliminate waste of water that now flows in an open stream bed.

The company ultimately plans a new filter plant of three-million gallons daily capacity at Barcroft Reservoir, to service the developing Fairfax County area in the vicinity.

First Round Lost in Auto Delivery Suit

A Washington patent attorney yesterday lost his first round in court in his effort to force delivery of a new auto on which he claims to have placed a deposit 22 months ago.

The attorney, Henry G. Bartsch, of 1716 V st. se., had brought suit for delivery and damages in Richmond Circuit Court against the Universal Motor Co., of Richmond, a Ford dealer, and the Ford Motor Co.

Judge Julien Gunn dismissed the Ford Motor Co. as a defendant in the case on the ground that Bartsch had not entered into a contract with that company but only with the dealer.

Judge Gunn also took under advisement the argument of the Universal Motor Co. that the case involved the question of damages for nondelivery, and as such, suit should be brought in a court of law,—not equity.

In his complaint, the Washington attorney claimed that he contracted for a Ford sedan or coupe on October 26, 1945, when he made a $25 deposit. In September, 1946, he said, he was advised by the company that he would receive the car within 30 to 60 days, but in December was notified that a car could not be delivered to him under any circumstances.

Bartsch asked the court to require the company to deliver the car and also to allow damages for business and time lost because of the alleged failure of performance.

She was taken to Emergency Hospital; later transferred to Mount Alto Hospital.

Despite Demand

Any Shortage Of Gasoline To Miss D. C.

Despite a tremendous postwar increase in the demand for gasoline in the Washington area, major suppliers said yesterday a shortage here this summer was unlikely.

Standard Oil Co. of Indiana has allocated its output for June, July and August in 12 Midwest and Western States.

However, Washington area suppliers pointed out that the shortage there was due to inadequate pipeline and refinery capacities, whereas the District vicinity gets its gas via tank cars, or tankers arriving in Baltimore.

A spokesman for the Washington Retail Gasoline Dealers said the organization was keeping close tab on the supply situation, and that although "spot shortages" were foreseen by the Department of Commerce on the East Coast, there was no sign Washington might suffer.

The 500 retail gas outlets here are very near the 1941 high sales mark of approximately 15 million gallons a month, the spokesman said. He added, in case of any shortage, the retailers here were prepared to put into effect emergency plans perfected during the shortage of 1941.

TRAFFIC FOLLOWS THE ARROWS—While Connecticut ave., between Q and R sts. nw., remains closed for repairs to a sewer cave-in, traffic is being detoured as indicated by broken lines and arrows. Maryland Man Without D. C. Tags Is Fined

Reciprocity Ruling Is Invoked Against Baltimore Broker

Marylanders who stay in Washington more than three months a year must purchase D. C. automobile tags, Judge Armond Scott of Municipal Court decided yesterday.

On that ground, Judge Scott found Aaron Levin, a broker from Baltimore, guilty of not having local tags and fined him $5 as a "nominal punishment."

Levin lives here three days a week and the rest of the time he is in Baltimore. This situation, said Judge Scott, makes Levin a "temporary resident of Washington."

Under the reciprocity provisions of automobile licensing regulations here, the District reciprocates with licensing requirements of any State. Maryland statutes compel "temporary residents" living in Maryland more than three months to purchase Maryland tags.

David Hornstein, counsel for Levin, said he will appeal the decision.

Traffic Jam At Circle to Be Over Soon

Connecticut ave. above Dupont circle will be reopened to traffic "by Monday if not before," a District official promised last night.

Harold A. Kemp, director of sanitary engineering, said repairs to a 70-year-old sewer, which caved in and caused closing of part of Connecticut ave., are coming along "very well."

"It's nothing serious," said Kemp.

Meanwhile, rerouting of buses and general public knowledge that Dupont cir le would be a good spot to avoid eased the traffic snarl there during rush hours last night.

While Connecticut ave. between Q and R sts. remains closed, Northbound traffic is being detoured up 19th st. from Dupont circle to R st., then over R st. to Connecticut ave.

Southbound traffic is being routed down 20th st. to Massachusetts ave. and then east to Dupont circle. The Capital Transit Co. rerouted three of its bus lines —D-4, MacArthur blvd.; D-2, Glover Park, and L-4, Connecticut ave.—from 20th to 21st sts. to help the situation.

Ordinarily, all three lines turn north on 20th st. from K st., with D-4 and D-2 going to Massachusetts ave., and L-4 to Connecticut ave. Under the rerouting schedule, D-4 and D-2 buses will go north on 21st st. to Massachusetts ave., and the L-4 bus will go north on 21st st. to Connecticut ave.

Streetcars are being allowed to travel the block where the sewer break occurred because their tracks are built on a special concrete foundation.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, said it was deemed advisable to detour auto traffic around the block because there is no similar foundation under the roadway traveled by these vehicles.

Other School Board Members Praise Textbook Hit by Lee

Adelbert W. Lee renewed his attack on the textbook "Building Citizenship" at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Education and other members of the board again took sharp issue with his criticisms terming them "unfair' and "dishonest."

Lee, who at two previous meetings of the board had described the text as containing un-American teachings, yesterday charged that it encourages revolution in government.

He objected to this passage of the text:

"Is revolution ever justifiable? Yes, if there is no other means of overthrowing wicked or selfish rulers and putting in power right principles and wise and honest leaders."

Chapter Read to Board

Board of Education President Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle called for the text book and read aloud the chapter containing the passage.

At the end of the reading Lee said his opinion was unchanged, but other members supported a motion presented by Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith commending the book as "an inspiring exposition of good governmental theory and citizenship."

A letter from Clay Coss, managing editor of "The American Observer," which also has been criticized by Lee, was read into the record by Dr. James A. Gannon. The letter said that Lee had misrepresented a conversation he had with the writer. Lee had reported that Coss had promised to change the policy of the paper because of the criticism and had admitted he was in error in printing an article unfavorable to West Point and Annapolis.

"Misrepresentation is on the other shoe," commented Lee.

Other Board Actions

In other actions yesterday the board:

Approved the appointment of Associate Superintendent of Schools Norman J. Nelson to first assistant superintendent. He succeeds Dr. Carroll R. Reed, who retired, and will be in charge of the schools during the absence of the superintendent.

Recommended that a committee consisting of the Board of Education, the Corporation Counsel's Office, the Budget Office and the Auditor's Office set new tuition rates for non-resident students.

$464,000 Bid Is Low for Glass School In Maryland

Prince Georges Elementary Unit May Be Ready For Use in 1948

The county board of education yesterday reported a low bid of $464,000 for construction of the revolutionary-type building which they hope will be completed in time for the 1948 fall school session.

Herring & McCall of Hyattsville submitted the low bid, which will be acted on, with others, at the regular meeting of the board on July 8. Bids for purchase of two million dollars of construction bonds to be advertised on June 27 and July 4, will be opened at this meeting also.

Light From Three Sides

Part of the proceeds of this bond sale, together with funds remaining from an issue sold last year, will be used to finance the school.

The school will be part one-story and part two-story, constructed on sloping ground on Varnum st. near the Defense hwy. Its nine classrooms are designed in a modified L-shape to provide light from three sides through glass brick walls. A portion of each wall will be of clear glass.

Each classroom will be a complete unit in itself, Paul D. Cooper, supervisor of construction for the board, said. There will be two types of classrooms, one having an adjoining project room, the other including the project room in one space.

Each classroom, whether on the first or second floor, will have a direct entrance from the school yard and will have its own lockers, toilet facilities and drinking fountains.

Direct Overhead Light

A skylight of glass brick on three sides and clear glass on the fourth will be built in the classroom ceilings to provide direct overhead light. Blackboards are to be placed only on one wall of each room to cut down light absorption. They will be of two heights, for teachers and pupils.

Also included in the plans, designed by Paul S. Kea, Hyattsville architect, are a gymnasium-auditorium, 56 by 70 feet, a 42-by-56 cafeteria, a library and a work room which can be utilized for classes.

The building will be L-shaped with provision for addition of a wing continuing the short leg of the L.

Barbers of Md. Given Permit Ultimatum

The State Board of Barber Examiners has issued an ultimatum that as of July 1 "no person will be permitted to practice barbering . . . until he has obtained a certificate of qualification."

Vincent A. Cinquegrani, board secretary, explained the body has been in existence since 1904.

"However, I suspect there has been some laxity in enforcing the permit requirements," he said in Baltimore yesterday.

"A new board was appointed by the Governor last spring, and it intends to see to it that every barber has his permit."

To get a permit, a barber must demonstrate his aptitude with a pair of shears and a head of hair.

the code which defines the practice of chiropody, points out that the law "does imply the authority to use local anesthetics" in performing such surgery as it specifies chiropodists may perform. However, he says "cocaine is much more than a local anesthetic."

"In my opinion," he continued, "the . . . provisions do not carry any implied authority to use narcotics where novacaine and other more appropriate drugs will answer the same purpose insofar as the surgical treatment is concerned."

Growth Delayed

Abnormal Cold Hits Md. Crops

Baltimore, June 25 (AP).—The Weather Bureau said in its weekly summary today the needed dry spell during the seven days ended Monday dried out fields, but below-normal temperatures hindered the development of belated Maryland crops.

Crop conditions by sections:

GARRETT, ALLEGANY AND WASHINGTON COUNTIES—Small grains good to very good, some wheat beginning to turn and harvest indicated about two weeks late. Corn good and growing fairly well, but needs more warm weather. Truck and garden crops late, but good and making good progress. Peas being gathered for canners. Tomatoes fruiting. String beans in bloom. Sweet corn growing well. Tree fruits making good progress. Small strawberry crop about over. Raspberries coming in. Pastures and hay crops variable, fair to very good.

WEST OF CHESAPEAKE BAY—Small grains good to excellent, very good to excellent wheat crop ripening and being cut. Oats about ready for cutting in southern counties. Truck and garden crops have improved to good in northern counties, good to very good in southern counties. Early tomatoes and potatoes blooming. In south, harvest of string beans, beets and greens has started, and sweet corn is beginning to tassel. Poor pea crop about ended. Cherries and raspberries ripening, blackberries have a heavy set. Tobacco crop 50 to 60 per cent set in the field, but recent rains have leached fertilizer out of the soil. Pastures very good to excellent.

EASTERN SHORE—Small grains progressing normally. Wheat is ripening and some has been cut. Army worms have attacked wheat fields in Kent County. Oats variable, good to excellent. Truck crops and gardens good to very good. String beans very good but late. Tree fruits developing normally. Pastures and hay crops short, rain needed in southern counties.

Flue-Cured Leaf Market Dates Are Set

Raleigh, N. C., June 25 (AP).—Marketing of the 1947 flue-cured tobacco crop will begin July 24, the same date as last year, on the Georgia-Florida belt. From there the auctions will move northward through the leaf country of the Carolinas and Virginia.

A 15-man committee composed of five buyers, five warehousemen and five growers, representing the three branches of the industry, yesterday set these opening dates for the other belts:

North-South Carolina Border—Monday, August 7; Eastern (North Carolina)—Tuesday, August 25; Middle—Monday, September 15; Old (North Carolina-Virginia)—Tuesday, September 23, and Virginia dark fire cured belt—Monday, December 8.

The committee, performing for the first time the duties formerly left to the Tobacco Association of the United States, also set the speed of sales on all markets at 400 piles per hour, and limited the maximum weight of each pile to 250 pounds.

Seafood Men Protest Order On Bay Buoys

Norfolk, Va., June 25 (AP).—Seafood interests in the Chesapeake Bay area have notified the office of the Norfolk district, Corps of Engineers, that removal of oyster buoys in navigation fairways where oyster grounds are located would require considerable changes in present methods of working the grounds.

This protest was lodged with the district engineer after a notice from his office last week that, effective July 1, all crab pots, oyster ground stakes and similar obstructions found to be illegally placed or not in compliance with regulations would be removed and the owners prosecuted.

In another notice, Col. G. T. Derby, district engineer, said that "since the placing of such buoys in navigation fairways is in violation of current regulations, it is urged that all seafood and navigation interests having information pertinent to this phase of the matter be present at the hearing" at the courthouse at Williamsburg at 2 o'clock Friday, June 27.

The hearing was called to consider requests for the establishment of new fishing limit lines and the modification of those now existing.

Bones for Bowser

Baltimore, June 25 (AP).—Old Mother Hubbard's dog was born too soon, judging by the latest innovation of a Baltimore restaurateur.

For years, diners had been asking waitresses for napkins in which to wrap bones left after a steak dinner.

"For Rover, you know," they would explain self-consciously.

Other dog owners were frankly afraid to ask, and would leave the restaurant with bones still on their plates.

Now all that is changed. Diners from which bones may be salvaged are accompanied by a wax-lined paper bag inscribed as follows:

Don't have all your fun alone.
Remember the pup who's waiting,
And take him a luscious bone.

Dog-License Drive Set

Frederick, Md., June 25.—The first concerted drive in years to have dogs licensed by owners will be launched Tuesday, the board of county commissioners decided yesterday. Sheriff Guy Anders has been instructed to enforce the new State-wide dog law, which requires all canines to be licensed.

Dogs found without licenses may be impounded or killed. Owners who fail to license their pets are subject to fines of from $20 to $100. Even if licensed, the dogs are not permitted to run at large, according to the commissioners.

Objections To York River Span Dropped

Richmond, Va., June 25 (AP).—Apparent solution to the long-standing controversy which has delayed construction of a York River bridge at Yorktown came today with announcement that the United States Navy Department has dropped its objections to a low-level span.

C. Gerard Davidson, Assistant Secretary of the Interior—which had opposed State plans for a high-level structure—notified Governor Tuck of withdrawal of the Navy's objections to a low-level bridge, provided certain conditions are met.

Initial reaction of State Highway Department officials was that the Navy's conditions could readily be met and the bridge still be located at approximately the same site as originally planned, spanning the river from Yorktown to Gloucester Point.

The Navy's conditions call for a minimum horizontal clearance of 250 feet, a minimum vertical clearance of 135 feet for the full 250-foot width, and location of the bridge more than 2000 yards from the nearest pier of the naval mine depot.

As a result of the Navy's decision, the Highway Department can scrap its plans for a high-level bridge and go to work immediately on plans for a low-level structure of the drawbridge type.

It has been estimated that a low-level bridge would cost perhaps two million dollars less than a high-level span—probably around six million dollars compared with an estimated eight million dollars for the high bridge at present construction costs.

The Navy's acquiesence in the low-level plan terminates a controversy that has cropped out off and on for 20 years.

Postlude

Todd Duncan Captivates His Audience

From Yesterday's Late Editions

Glinka: Russian and Ludmilla Overture; Schubert: Symphony No. 8 in B Minor; Strauss: Voices of Spring; McKay: Suite on Fiddlers' Tunes; Enesco: Roumanian Rhapsody No. 1. Songs and arias by Handel, Rossini, Moussorgsky, Kern, Gershwin and others, National Symphony Orchestra, Richard Bales, conductor; Todd Duncan, baritone soloist. Tuesday evening, Watergate.

By Paul Hume

Todd Duncan, Washington's most distinguished singer and one of its finest artistic ornaments, appeared with the National Symphony orchestra at last night's Watergate concert and took the large audience completely by storm.

His brilliant voice, superbly used, gave forth a noble account of Caesar's aria from Handels' Scipio. The phrases "Hear me ye winds and waves' 'resounded across the rippling currents of the river in perfect accord with the surroundings. Figaro's aria from Rossini's Barber, Moussorgsky's Song of the Flea, and for encores, Old Man River, and I Got Plenty of Nothin', did not satisfy the audience. Duncan had also given perfect accounts of a Haitian folk song, and the spiritual, Let Us Break Bread Together. Yet for some who listened in absolute silence, the most moving moment came when, with no music but the sound of a single voice, they heard "I've heard of a city called heaven." Washington is honored in Todd Duncan. When will the time come when we may show that honor by asking him to sing for us in concert halls?

Richard Bales, who gave the soloist well-proportioned support, led the orchestra in a spirited reading of the overture to Russian and Ludmila. The finest orchestral work of the evening came in a spacious but alive account of Schubert's B Minor symphony, beloved as the "Unfinished." The thrice-familiar music moved with singing beauty as Bales allowed its simplicity to speak easily. Coming over the improved amplifying system, the music was actually fresh in sound and appeal. A Strauss waltz, a Fiddler's Suite in its Washington premiere, and Enesco's First Roumanian Rhapsody filled out the finest program to date in the season.

Now if the management will reconsider their ill-advised dictum concerning the seating of late-comers, and realize that radio must not be allowed to dictate to the live audience, we will be off to a fine start in our summer musical fare.

Funds Sought To Cut Fly-Ash At Incinerator

The Commissioners yesterday asked Congress to add $15,000 to the 1948 District budget for experiments aimed at cutting down fly-ash at the Georgetown incinerator.

Georgetown citizens protested at a Commissioners' public hearing May 6 that fly-ash from the incinerator at 31st and Q sts. n.w. was "a menace to health and property."

The Commissioners based their request on a memorandum from Sanitary Engineer Harold Kemp, which they asked Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.) to include in the budget hearing record of his House District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee.

Kemp recommended $10,000 to be used to build an experimental "water trap" fly-ash control plant, and $5000 for temporary hiring of experts and consultants.

He added, however, that, based on investigations during periods when the incinerator was shut down for repairs, I estimate that 60 per cent of the ash comes from other sources to which the residents of Georgetown are major contributors," he added.

Miss Keim, 88, Baptist Church Worker, Dies

Miss Lilly Keim, long-time Washington resident and prominent in Baptist Church circles, died here yesterday at the age of 88 after a short illness.

Funeral services for Miss Keim, who lived at 1329 Longfellow st. nw., will be held at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow at the Hines funeral home.

Guschewsky and Miss Emma Guschewsky, who resided with Miss Keim.

Judge Helps Defeat Plea For Rezoning

Judge Brice Clagett of Municipal Court of Appeals stepped down from the bench long enough yesterday to win a neighborhood fight before the Board of Zonnig Adjustments.

The board denied Israel and Joseph Mendelson's request to change an interior decorating shop to a grocery and delicatessen at 3003 P st. nw., after Judge Clagett said the grocery would draw rats to the neighborhood.

It was one of only three denials in 34 cases heard by the board yesterday.

Permission was granted for the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association to set up an information center at 1303 New Hampshire ave. nw., after the board learned that Former Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard and a number of Congressmen had indorsed the proposal.

The board also approved two requests made under a new zoning regulation which permits office buildings on lower 16th st.

Glen F. Murphy was given permission to use property at 903 16th st. nw., as an office building; Teck Construction Co. received similar privileges at 1020 16th st.

Approval also was given for Potomac Electric Power Co. to build a transformer and switching building at 201 44th st. ne.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Infant, 11 Months Old, Rocks Crib Violently At Night; Neighbors Fret as It Spoils Their Rest; College Trained Mother Sniffs at This

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Both my husband and I are college trained, with a rather broad background of experience. He is a Ph. D. and I am a former teacher. We have two children, a daughter past 4 years and a son, 11 months old.

We live in an apartment building where the walls are very thin, anything but sound-proof. Our next door neighbors are a couple of very ordinary young people, not college trained, who also have two children, a daughter the same age as ours and a new baby 7 weeks old.

They've had a little trouble, not much, adjusting their baby to his schedule, and they lose about a half hour's sleep giving him a night feeding. Our baby, who is teething, wakens at night and is a violent crib rocker as he goes back to sleep. This bothers them; they say it further breaks their rest; and they want us to prevent him from rocking back and forth.

We feel that this is his way of exercising himself, and it wouldn't bother us so long as we know he was happy and would in all probability go back to sleep soon. Though we give him toys to distract him, eventually he goes back to rocking to lull himself to sleep—and I admit he is a violent crib rocker.

Tells Neighbors To Retire Early

WE'VE TOLD the neighbors they should retire earlier if they know their rest is going to be broken by both their baby and ours. But evidently the lady of the house does quite a bit of her work at night, such as ironing, making the baby's formula, etc. She sleeps until 9 or sometimes 9:30 a. m.; and rests from 1:30 to 4 p. m., when she expects everyone else to be quiet.

Saturday nights they frequently go out, taking their children with them, to the home of friends for poker and beer, returning around 2 or 3 a. m.; then on Sunday mornings when our baby wakes and makes noises at 5:30 or 6 a. m., they are angry, to put it mildly, about their loss of sleep.

Our little girls play together and we wish to get along. Are they being overly sensitive in allowing our baby's crib rocking to disturb them? Or are we being selfish and inconsiderate for not stopping him? Is he old enough to spank? And would he understand why he is being spanked? What do you suggest? We want to do what is right in this silly fuss—and neither family is in a position to move.

P. B.

Baby Is Giving Distress Signal

DEAR P. B.: Your baby's violent crib rocking is a distressing phenomenon, quite aside from the fact that the neighbors are fussing because it disturbs their night rest.

From the specialist's viewpoint, as outlined in Dr. Margaret Ribble's book, "The Rights of Infants," he is suffering acutely for lack of sensory stimuli and satisfaction which should be supplied by generous amounts of close warm physical mothering. His crib rocking means that he is instinctively trying to compensate for this lack.

It is a self-protective performance; a form of struggle to survive. But the fact that he has to make such a struggle—for lack of good emotional nurture that should be forthcoming from the mother—has very unfortunate effects on baby's nervous stability.

It tends to thwart his mental development as well as impair his chances of normally evolving wholesome, satisfying love relationships in later years. Indeed, some infants less hardy than your son, when similarly deprived of adequate mothering, tend as it were to withdraw from life, into a pale and piteous passivity, showing little if any interest in food or surroundings.

Baby Requires More Mothering

EITHER your child rearing theories are out of date, still keyed to the notion (coined some years back and since discredited) that baby should be kept on a rigorous schedule of food, sleep and comparative isolation from family, and handled as little as possible to prevent "spoiling,"—or else you are being casually heartless about neglecting the infant in order to run your home with assembly-line efficiency.

It would be a dreadful mistake to spank the baby for his crib rocking. That would be dealing outrageous shock to his already precariously disturbed nervous system.

He needs rather to be held in his mother's arms for a play period at regular intervals during the day before his feedings, and especially in the late afternoon or before night bedtime. Then he should be rocked to sleep in mother's arms, while she sings gentle lullabies.

The vital importance of such mothering is carefully explicated, time and again, in Dr. Ribble's invaluable book, published in 1943 by Columbia University Press and now in its seventh printing. My advice is to read this book, reform your ways and bless the neighbors as angels in disguise for forcing baby's needs on your attention.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Can you please tell me how to remove a dark, greasy spot from a concrete floor? We have tried suds, cleanser, etc., but without success. G. W. L.

Scrub the floor with a solution of 4 ounces of trisodium phosphate to 1 gallon of hot water and scouring powder, using a stiff brush. Rinse well. If stains are old, sprinkle with trisodium phosphate and moisten with a little water. Let stand at least a half hour, then scrub and rinse as above. Or mix whiting with enough of the trisodium phosphate solution to make a thick paste and cover the stained area with the paste and leave until dry. Remove and rinse.

I have a brand-new red alligator handbag. Is there any special care needed to keep the leather in good condition? I only use the bag about twice a month. Would the same care apply to red alligator shoes? How are artichokes served? Y. T.

Buy a reptile cleaner from your shoe dealer and use it on both bag and shoes, following the directions on the package. When not being used, the bag should be stuffed with and wrapped in tissue.

Soak artichokes in cold water for 30 minutes. Cut off the stems, the tough bottom leaves and one quarter of the top leaves. Place on the stove enough water to cover the artichokes. Add 1 onion (sliced), 2 ribs of celery with leaves, 1½ teaspoons lemon juice, 1½ teaspoons salt to 1 quart of water. When water is boiling, add the artichokes. Cook them for 45 minutes. Drain and serve hot with melted butter, mayonnaise or Hollandaise sauce. Or they may be cooked this way, then allowed to cool and served cold in salads.

Would you please tell me what is the best way to remove decals from painted wood surfaces? I would also like to remove the decals from my bathroom walls. The walls are painted plaster. Will painting over these surfaces cover the decals? Thank you for any help you can give me. E. M. C.

Dampen the decals with a wet cloth or sponge and keep damp for 30 minutes to allow the moisture to penetrate and they should pull off very easily. Two coats of good paint should cover the decals. It's better to remove them, however, if the above treatment brings results.

Clothes Drive Should Send You Unpacking

REMEMBER those old clothes in the bottom of your trunk, the ones you've been meaning to give away for so long?

There's a clothing depot near you that's ready and waiting to receive them for shipment to suffering people overseas. It's operated by Church World Service, Inc., and would like to have your contributions as soon as possible so they can reach Europe by fall.

"The need for clothing overseas is worse now than a year ago," Graham R. Hodges, representative of the service, said today. "Very little wool and cotton are being imported in war-ravaged countries. So many animals were killed that leather is scarce. Clothes wear out more rapidly because there isn't enough soap and dry cleaning fluid to keep them clean. And besides clothing, bedding, household supplies, shop tools, and many other articles are needed."

Church World Service, which is sponsored by 26 Protestant denominations, maintains contribution depots at three downtown churches—the First Congregational, Calvary Baptist, and Mount Vernon Methodist. Sixteen other depots are scattered through residential areas. Their exact location can be obtained by telephoning National 4604. In some instances, a collector will call for your contribution. Cloth barracks bags will be mailed to you upon request. These can be filled and shipped easily to the Church World Service Center, at New Windsor, Md.

The center at New Windsor is also looking for volunteers to help pack clothing for shipment overseas. It offers a week's room and board at old Blue Ridge College to those who volunter to come to New Windsor to help with this work.

Summer Slimming Schedule

Punch Pillow and Swing To Beautify Upper Arms

To arms! Lovely Kay Christopher, RKO starlet, demonstrates an exercise for beautifying the upper arms. With arms at shoulder level . . . swing! To make this a waistliner, twist smack at the waist as you swing arms, but keep hips squarely to the front

By Ida Jean Kain

This is the fourth of a series of articles on summer slimming.

THE triceps, resting inertly on the backs of the upper arms, are the laziest of muscles. It's the biceps on the front of the arms that do the work . . . the biceps are those muscles that men flex so impressively. No lady is particularly keen about being Miss Muscles, or having bulging biceps, but along about this season she cares even less for sagging triceps.

This part of the arm represents a dead area, muscularly speaking, which explains why they get flabby and droop with fat. Or just droop. And needless to point out, droopy thin arms are no ad for short sleeves either!

To reduce this area, our favorite pillow punching exercise is worked out on scientific lines, really does tell the fat where to get off, and firms and rounds the upper arms.

The Old One-Two

RIG up an old sofa pillow, preferably one with a lot of suffing in it; suspend it is doorway, about shoulder level, or just slightly above, then punch, punch, punch. This exercise is really fun to do, and besides toning the arm muscles, helps restore tone to the pectoral muscles which support the bust.

Hold the right arm out at shoulder level, tense the muscles and make tiny circles. To make sure you are working these back arm muscles, place fingers of the left hand on the spot as you circle. Make 12 circles in one direction, then 12 in the other, keeping the circle small, as wide one miss their mark.

Forcible extension of the elbow puts these muscles vigorously to work, so start with arms down at sides, raise to shoulder level, bend elbow, touching finger tips to shoulders, back out to shoulder, twice bend to shoulders, then down, swinging rhythmically and forcibly.

HERE'S your slimming menu for today. For a complete 10-day set, write to Ida Jean Kain, Room 408, Washington Post, inclosing stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Tomato Juice in Summer Variations

TOMATO juice, rich in body, flavor and vitamins, can be used in dozens of ways to bring variety to your tables.

Let's start with Quick Tomato Aspic and see how many different salads can be made with this popular base. From the same basis recipe you may have a light salad, a main course aspic, or a molded dessert.

BASIC RECIPE

Soak 2 tbsp. gelatin in ½ cup cold tomato juice. Dissolve this in 3½ cups of hot tomato juice. Add 2 cups lemon juice. Mold, chill and serve.

VARIATIONS

Add 1 or 2 cupfuls of any of the following solid ingredients, before molding:

FROZEN TOMATO ASPIC

Pour tomato aspic in refrigerator tray. Chill until partially frozen. Remove and beat in mixture 1 or 2 stiffly whipped egg whites. Return to refrigerator and freeze. Serve in cubes, topped with a dab of mayonnaise.

Serve These Vegetables With Skins On

When skins are tender, scrub and serve these vegetables with skins on—cucumber, carrots, tomatoes and summer squash. Leave skins on apples for salads, fruit cups, apple sauce.

Don't Treat Eldest Child Like Stepson

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

IT IS easy for a mother to become aggravated with a child who follows her about whining, crying and demanding attention. If she has a younger child, who must be held and cared for, her attentions to the older child may all be punitive ones.

"Can't you see mother is busy? Now, be a good boy and play with all your nice things. Don't ask me to hold you, I can't do it. I have too many other things to do."

What she should realize is that the demanding child is one who for all of these reasons—the mother's refusal to give him attentions, the presence of another child, the scolding and criticism he receives for his behavior—feels left out, unsure of himself, anxious about his place in the affection of the mother.

When a child feels the need for more affection or believes he has slipped into a subordinate position with the parent, his actions reveal his state of mind. He is never happy away from the parent. He screams when she leaves the room. He hangs on her when she is nearby. Thus does he advertise he is unhappy, ill-at-ease and anxious.

Let the mother stop thinking of how she can force the child to act differently, and what punishment will be suitable to his behavior. Instead, let her treat him in those ways which will bolster his self-confidence.

She should make opportunities to play with him alone, not with the other child, of whatever age. She should take time to cuddle him and read or sing to him when he goes to bed. Welcome his help with the housework, however inept. By such methods she frees the child of fear that he is unloved,

Garden Party Honors Saudi-Arabian Prince

By Marie McNair

HIS Highness Prince Nawaf Al-Saud, fourteenth son of King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, is quite a lad. Prince Nawaf was guest of honor at a garden party at the Saudi Arabian Legation yesterday; bowed ceremoniously as the guests filed by, and then like any small boy when he's hungry, took his place at a garden table for a supper of roast lamb stuffed with spiced rice, turkey, and ice cream.

The young Prince speaks no English but he was more than willing to talk through his interpreter.

What did he find most interesting on his visit to Washington?

"Congress" he answered himself, and his interpreter took up from there. Yesterday the Prince sat in on a session of the House of Representatives. He went through the White House, and came away with the impression that never before had he seen a house of such great historic importance.

An inverate movie fan since he's been in this country, the youthful Prince rates "Dear Ruth" as his favorite.

"And what about our modern dances," I asked him.

"Sorry," was the reply, "I'm not interested in dancing."

Flowers Everywhere

The green and white flag of Saudi Arabia flew next to the Stars and Stripes from the legation window yesterday. Flowers were entwined around white trellises, and gardenia bushes in full bloom perfumed the air. On the broad terrace the Minister, Sheikh Asad Al-Faqih, in flowing white robes and turban twisted with black and gold, sought shelter from the afternoon sun under a garden umbrella. The Prince, in his native costume, was at his side and K. D. Zerekly, Deputy Minister of Foreign Affairs, was also in the receiving line.

Mme. Al-Faqih was nowhere in sight for, according to Moslem custom, wives are never present in mixed company. But viewing the garden scene from a balcony was the Minister's young son, Khalid, who'll be 5 years old next month.

Colored lights had been strung through the trees; two very natural looking cardboard camels of almost life size were strolling through the garden and bouquets of summer flowers in pastel shades decorated the small supper tables which dotted the lawn.

Admirals There

Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy was among the first to arrive, sampled the Arabian coffee served from a carved brass container, and was soon on his way. Fleet Admiral and Mrs. Chester Nimitz came later, as did Gen. Harry Vaughan, Military Aide to the President and Mrs. Vaughan, and Presidential Secretary Charles Ross and Mrs. Ross.

Rear Admiral James H. Foskett, Naval Aide to President Truman, and Mrs. Foskett were there, and I saw the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins enjoying the scene from the sidelines. The Indian Ambassador, Asaf Ali, was there, and the Turkish Ambassador, Huseyin Ragip Baydur, the Afghanistan Minister, Abdol Hosayn Aziz.

Others there were the Egyption Military Attache and Mme. Ragab who told me they're going home next month; Raymond Muir, assistant Chief of Protocol of the State Department, and Mrs. Muir; Richard Sanger of the State Department; William McChesney Martin, president of the Export-Import Bank and Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Zoya telling me about her new house at 3203 R st., to which they will move on Monday.

Marriner Eccles was introducing his pretty daughter, Mrs. Harold Steele from Salt Lake City; Emil Hurja was looking for his wife who failed to show up; and then there were bachelors Anwar Niazi of the Egyptian Embassy staff, and Bill Jenkins.

Mrs. Spruille Braden Feted at Farewell

SENORA DE GARCIA GRANADOS, wife of the Ambassador of Guatemala, was hostess at tea yesterday at the embassy as a farewell to Mrs. Spruille Braden, wife of the former Assistant Secretary of State, who will leave on Saturday with Mr. Braden for New York.

Guests included wives of members of the Latin-American Diplomatic Corps as well as the various South American missions.

Combs Entertain for Lincoln

BRIG. Gen. and Mrs. G. A. Lincoln, who have been transferred to West Point, were the guests in whose honor Col. and Mrs. Cecil E. Combs entertained at Army and Navy Country Club dinner dance last night. Others in the party were Gen. and Mrs. Lauris Norstad, Gen. Cortlandt Schuyler, Col. and Mrs. Robert Warren. Before going to the Point the Lincolns and their three children plan to spend the summer in Colorado.

The debutante's gown was of sheer white, with a long bouffant skirt, eyelet embroidered, tight fitting bodice. A tiny cape of matching eyelet covered her shoulders. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of pastel flowers. Mrs. Kearny wore a long gown of pale blue chiffon.

Several of last winter's debs had been asked to assist. In the group were Miss Ethel Van Devanter, Miss Ellen Jackson, Miss Evelyn Maddox and Miss Agnes Dunn. Also, Miss Louise Leahy and Miss Mary Pearl Alexander and Miss Suzanne Alexander, who were presented to society this spring.

Story Leaguers Meet Here To Retell American Folklore

"GO out and tell stories . . . spread the folk tales of your country . . . they are the very life of America."

So says a practicing dentist from New York's Bellevue Hospital and author of 23 books on juvenile literature, Dr. Moritz A. Jagendorf. He discussed American folklore last night during the opening session of the biennial convention of the Eastern District of the National Story League, at the Willard Hotel. His talk followed an informal reception and welcome address by Miss Edith Allnutt, president of the Washington Story League.

"Folk tales express us as nothing else does," said Dr. Jagendorf, president of the New York League. "They tell of our dreams, ideals and aspirations."

Born in Austria

Now a naturalized American, he was born in Austria and came to the United States at the age of 14. A graduate of Columbia and Yale, he began writing children's plays and established the Children's Playhouse in New York. A one-act play, "Pierre Patalin," first produced in 1910, is still paying royalties. Surprised at the lack of interest in American folklore, he studied anthropology, published a few stories in a juvenile magazine, has turned out an average of two books a year ever since. Deciding he needed a profession, he finished a dentistry course in time to serve in the Dental Corps during the First World War.

Dr. Jagendorf's discussion was illustrated by folk tales from different parts of the country. Among the story tellers were Jo Carroll (Mrs. George Young), who told of Johnny Darling, hero of New York State; Miss Bertha Nathan, who gave four Maryland legends of the creation in the Gullah dialect; Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, who related a folk tale of the District, and Mrs. Adlyn M. Keffer, Harrisburg, Pa., a past national president, who told the story of "Young John," and how a grateful shad he threw back in the river led him to the valuable coal deposits of Pennsylvania.

The program closed with a group of folk songs by Mrs. Frances Tracy.

4-Day Conference

About 150 story-tellers from the 27 leagues comprising the Eastern district are gathered in Washington for the four-day conference at the Willard. Miss Kate Lenoir of Washington is general chairman and Miss Mary Ellen Dashiell, program chairman. Mrs. Helen B. Stitt heads the Eastern district.

Some members concentrate on only one story; others, like Mrs. Keffer, can tell 125 without repeating.

"I don't think a lovely story is for one person alone," she states. "It should be told to many people, so that its beauty may be shared."

Many fairy tales, she maintains, such as Andersen's and Grimm's, are really written for the grown-ups, but can be softened when related to children.

"In fact," says Mrs. Keffer, "fairy tales are most popular with adults and the homes for the aged clamor for stories of romance. Children only care for them until the age of 10, when they turn to adventure stories." But the story-tellers have a variety to please all tastes.

New Congressional Club Organized

Newest of the congressional ladies clubs is the group which was organized last week by the wives of members of Congress who came to Washington before the Sixty-eighth Congress. The members held their first meeting last week in the apartment of Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of the Senator from Georgia, at the Mayflower.

At that time Mrs. Fred M. Vinson whose husband is now Chief Justice, was elected president. Mrs. Clyde Martin Reed of Kansas is first vice president and Mrs. George, second vice president. Secretary is Mrs. Lister Hill and Mrs. Charles L. McNary is treasurer.

Guests of Peppers

Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper have as house guests Mrs. Pepper's bother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lansing Snyder of Miami, Fla. They will visit here a few days and then go on to their summer home in Clearfield, Pa. Mrs. Pepper has recently returned from Florida.

Mrs. Filbert's MARGARINE
Mrs. Filbert's Quality MAYONNAISE
Mrs. Filbert's QUALITY FRENCH DRESSING

Baltimore, Md., June 23rd. Mrs. Filbert and her family invite you and your family to taste these four delicious flavors.

Constant blending thirty years ago perfected the margarine that Mrs. Filbert first sold in her own neighborhood. Because it was extra good, more economical, fresher and sweeter tasting too, its fame grew until today, Mrs. Filbert's Margarine is first choice of millions. Mrs. Filbert believes you'll prefer her margarine on bread, for cooking, frying and baking to ANYTHING you've ever tasted. Each pound gives you 15,000 units of Vitamin A. Grand for children.

Mrs. Filbert's Mayonnaise, too, is a woman's idea of what good mayonnaise should be. That smooth, tangy freshness seems right off the egg beater itself.

Mrs. Filbert's real mayonnaise is richer—goes further. Also don't miss Mrs. Filbert's Salad Dressing and her newest salad thrill, Mrs. Filbert's French Dressing. Enjoy them now—during June, when salads taste so cool and cost so little.

D. C. League's Loans in Year Up 43 Million

By S. Oliver Goodman

The 27 member associations of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League have $257,800,000 in mortgage loans, a net gain of 43 million for the year ended May 31.

Rudolph W. Santelmann, league president, also reported yesterday that May volume of home loans continued heavy. The nine-million-dollar figure for the month, however, was well under the all-time high of 11 million recorded in May, 1946.

Santelmann noted that combined resources of the 27 institutions now stood at a new record of slightly more than 300 million dollars. This was a gain of 32 million for the 12-month period.

Savings share members increased their investments to $255,679,000, up 26 million for the period. The institutions maintain savings and borrowing accounts with 204,000 persons, about one out of five in the metropolitan area.

Leon B. Brubaker, resident manager of the Washington office of Bache & Co., may be likened to the Hollywood version of a city editor. In the midst of ringing phones he can write orders, answer questions and probably figure out at the same time what he's going to have for lunch.

That lunch will have plenty of vegetables, as he's "sort of a vegetarian." For recreation, he likes golf best. Follows football games with keen interest.

"Bru," as he's called by associates, finds Washington investing public active in wheat and cotton. Says steels, motors and oils are trading favorites here.

He's in mid-40s, has iron-gray hair and has been in the investment brokerage field here since 1929. Came to the District of Columbia in 1922 from Altoona, Pa., attended George Washington University, American U. and studied at Cleveland Law School.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—An active demand for corn based on pessimistic crop reports created a new record high for the July contract at $2.02¼ on the board of trade today.

All deferred corn contracts also were strong. Oats made fractional gains, while wheat, after recording losses for nearly the entire session, rose in the last 15 minutes to end with minor gains. Both wheat and oats were aided by the upturn in corn.

Wheat closed ½@1¼ higher, July, 2.17½@2.17¾; corn was 2¼@2½ higher, July, 2.02@2.02¼, and oats were ⅝@⅞ higher, July, 98@98⅜.

Cash corn did not follow the advance in futures prices. Corn declined 1 to 4 a bushel in the spot market. These divergent price trends narrowed the gap between cash and July future prices, although there still is a difference of around 20 a bushel.

Scattered showers in the Midwest, plus more floods in Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri, served as the stimulus for corn buying. A report from Iowa said the outlook had grown worse in the past few days and that major corn-producing State probably will come up with its smallest crop in 10 years.

Chicago Brokerage Suspended by SEC

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP).—The Securities and Exchange Commission today revoked the broker-dealer registration of Behel, Johnson & Co., Inc., Chicago, and expelled the firm from membership in the National Association of Securities Dealers.

The commission's action was based on its charges that the firm violated certain provisions of the Securities Exchange Act by inducing a great number of transactions and successive turnovers in the accounts of three customers "solely for the purpose of its own gain and to the substantial detriment of the customers."

The agency declared the firm's business activities were controlled by William L. Johnsen and Robert B. Pennington, officers and directors.

Va. Revenues Unexpectedly Hit New Highs

State Comptroller Henry G. Gilmer said today revenue for the first 11 months of this fiscal year total $232,564,399.53, an increase of $48,125,462.70 over the previous year.

Receipts of the State's general fund, from which appropriations are made for general operations of the State government, already total $50,054,673.23, an increase of $5,111,866.84 over the same period a year ago and well above last year's 12-month total of $47,838,000.

With another month's collections to come, it appeared obvious that record-shattering amounts would be listed in practically all principal revenue categories.

The May, 1947, collections in all funds totaled $23,049,480.26 compared with $18,732(426.26 in May, 1946. In the general fund, the May receipts this year amounted to $4,708,610.91 as against $4,210,666.96 in 1946.

This fund's 11-month receipts from taxes now total $41,330,968.34, a gain of $3,649,589.15 over the previous year. Collections from the intangible personnal property tax are up $454,066.32; individual income taxes are running $957,933.31 ahead of last year; corporation income tax collections are up $1,261,922.65, and taxes on insurance company premiums also ofreflect good times with an increase of $504,136.75. The beer excise tax shows a gain of $249,031.10 over the first 11 months of the previous fiscal year.

The general fund also has realized a gain of $1,146,309.56 from "rights and privileges" during the 11 months, bringing total revenues from this source to $6,665,316.58. This category covers licenses and permits, corporate franchises and charters, and related revenue sources.

The over-all increase of more than $48,000,000 in total State collections includes big jumps in gross receipts from the sale of alcoholic liquors and in collections from the State gasoline tax, which was raised a cent by the 1946 General Assembly.

Wheat Flooding Richmond Mill at $2.18 Delivered

Richmond, Va., June 25 (AP).—Heavy loads of wheat were moving to Richmond today in such quantities that trucks were lined up for many blocks on the Mayo bridge, while farmers waited impatiently for them to be unloaded at the Dixie-Portland Flour Mills.

Charles W. Thompson, mill manager, declared the grain was moving "like a flash flood," and said the sudden influx apparently was due to higher prices currently being paid on the Richmond market.

The Dixie-Portland Mills, Thompson said, are paying $2.18 to farmers for wheat delivered to the mill. This is the identical figure quoted for July deliveries on the Chicago grain market. Thompson said prices in Norfolk, Portsmouth, and North Carolina were around the $2 mark and were below that in Oklahoma and Texas marts.

Man Gets 2 Years For Nonsupport

A Laurel, Md., father of two children was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction on nonsupport charges yesterday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court.

The man, John J. White, had previously been ordered to pay $15 a week for the support of his family at the October, 1946, session of the court. Again, last February, he was ordered to make increased payments to clear up the amount he had fallen in arrears.

In June he was brought into court once again for nonpayment and after his failure to appear at a continuance of the case, he was sentenced yesterday by Judge John B. Gray, jr.

Admiral Ingersoll to Leave Naval Academy for Hawaii

Annapolis, Md., June 25 (AP).—The Navy announced today Rear Admiral Stuart H. Ingersoll, commandant of midshipmen at the Naval Academy, will be replaced Sunday by Capt. Frank T. Ward, jr.

Ingersoll, known to the middies as "Slim," will go to Kaneohe Bay, T. H., where he will take command of Fleet Air Wing 2.

Ward, a native of Raleigh, N. C., comes to the Naval Academy post with plenty of aviation training behind him.

Early in the last war Ingersoll took part in convoy escort duty in the North Atlantic and later commanded the Carrier Monterey in raids on Wake, Truk, Hollandia, the Marianas, Guam, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and Formosa and took part in the Leyte and Luzon invasions.

Capt. Ward Adm. Ingersoll

Ward commanded the Carrier Shambrock Bay in the Okinawa fight and won the Legion of Merit.

He later became chief of staff at the Jacksonville (Fla.) Naval Air Station and his most recent assignment was work on commissioning the Carrier Wright.

Md. Recount Shows Fraud, Jenner Says

By The Associated Press

Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) said yesterday that "evidences of fraud" have been uncovered in a recount of Maryland's disputed 1946 senatorial election and that two Senate staff probers have been assigned to investigate.

D. John Markey, defeated Republican candidate, is contesting the election of Senator O'Conor, a Democrat, on grounds of errors and irregularities.

O'Conor, former Maryland Governor, won the election by an official State margin of 2232 votes, or less than one half of 1 per cent of the votes cast.

Jenner, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Elections, said that committee staff checkers working on a recount now under way in Baltimore "stumbled into the evidences of fraud."

He added: "They weren't looking for it. There may be more."

Checkers, Jenner said, found "many illegal voters who were not properly registered" and also discovered that more than 1000 unused paper ballots in Prince Georges County were "unaccounted for."

His statement was the first allegation by a committee member of fraudulent practices in the election.

Thornhill Indictments Dismissed by Judge

Logan, W. Va., June 25 (AP).—Circuit Judge C. C. Chambers today dismissed three remaining vote fraud indictments against W. A. (Red) Thornhill, former Raleigh County prosecutor and unsuccessful Democratic candidate for the State Senate in last fall's elections.

A Logan County jury earlier this month acquitted Thornhill on a fourth indictment charging him with alteration and defacement of ballots.

2 Husbands Would Split Bail For Wife in Md. Bigamy Case

Baltimore, June 25 (U.P.).—Magistrate Preston A. Pairo was one of the three most confused men in Baltimore today.

The others were the husbands, Nos. 1 and 2, of 22-year-old Mrs. Gracie Hodges-Candelaro, a brunette eyeful whom the judge put away in the city lockup today for having one more mate than the legal limit.

It all started when Elmer W. Hodges, who is 21 and used to be a barber until Gracie sold all his clippers, noticed that his wife had been missing from home for three weeks.

Out Comes Joseph

Hodges knew where to look. He went there and rapped politely on the door. Out came 24-year-old Joseph Candelaro.

I would like to see my wife, Hodges said.

I mean Gracie, Hodges explained.

Candelaro was amazed. He pointed out that Gracie was his wife and he had the marriage license to prove it.

About that time, Gracie showed on the scene and Hodges called for the police.

In court, Hodges told Magistrate Pairo that Gracie had caused him a lot of trouble and something ought to be done about it.

He said he couldn't even practice his trade because Gracie sold all his barbering tools. She also sold some lots he owned for $1,400, he said.

She Pleads Guilty

The judge asked Gracie how about it. She wouldn't talk about the barber tools and the lots, but she pleaded guilty to bigamy.

Pairo rapped his gavel sternly, ordered her held in $1000 bail for Grand Jury action, and asked the two wronged husbands what they thought.

The two went into a whispered conference, then stepped sheepishly up to the bench.

Hodges said he was confused, but he was going to stand by Gracie. Candelaro said, me too. They said they wanted to split Gracie's bail.

The judge said he was confused, too. He sent them off to try to raise the $1000.

Gracie said nothing. The police said she would have to stay in jail until Hodges and Candelaro come back with the $1000.

Ensor Named Western Md. College Head

Westminster, Md., June 25 (AP).—The board of trustees of Western Maryland College announced today the appointment of the Rev. Lowell Skinner Ensor, pastor of Westminster Methodist Church, as president of the college.

Dr. Ensor succeeds Dr. Fred Holloway, who resigned as president after 13 years service, to become dean of the theological seminary at Drew University, Madison, N. J.

Dr. Ensor, a member of the board of trustees, was ordained as a minister in 1929 and became a member of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church, serving in Prince Frederick and Pikesville, Md., before becoming pastor of Centenary Methodist Church here in 1940.

The new university head was born in 1907 in Baltimore, the son of the Rev. Dr. John T. Ensor and Mrs. Ensor, who still live there He was graduated from Baltimore City College in 1923.

He received his bachelor of arts degree from Johns Hopkins University in 1928 and a bachelor of divinity degree from Drew University in 1931. Western Maryland College conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of divinity in 1944.

Dr. Ensor was married to the former Eloise Bittner, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Bittner of Harrisburg, Pa., in 1931. They have one daughter, Caryl Jeanne, 2. Mrs. Ensor was educated at New York University, where she received her bachelor of science and education degree. Later she received her master of arts degree from Drew University.

Dr. Ensor was instrumental in effecting the merger of Centenary and Immanuel Churches here, and in 1941 he was continued as pastor of the new Westminster Methodist Church.

He is a charter member of the Pikesville Kiwanis Club.

Tonight, college officials and educators gathered in the college dining room for a testimonial dinner to Dr. Holloway.

Martinsburg Blamed For Water Pollution

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 25.—Dr. G. P. Morison, Berkeley County health officer, pointed to Martinsburg as "chief offender" in the pollution of suburban park water sources. He said that "the West Virginia State Water Commission is taking the attitude that no industry should be singled out to make the necessary corrections until the City of Martinsburg, which is by far the worst offender, takes some action."

His statement was in reply to a letter of inquiry from the Berkeley County Park and Recreation Association as to the safety of water at Oatesdale park for swimming and wading.

Correction

Owing to a typographical error, a mistake appeared in a recent story in The Post concerning the August Democratic primary election in Fairfax County. In referring to candidates for House of Delegates and county treasurer, the article should have read: House of Delegates: Edwin Lynch, Annandale, incumbent; Robert J. McCandlish, jr., Fairfax. Treasurer: L. M. Coyner, Fairfax, incumbent; G. W. McGlinchy, Herndon.

The Post regrets the error.

Marine Freed As Navy Brig Trials End

Annapolis, Md., June 25 (AP).—A Navy court-martial today acquitted Marine Pfc. Roger E Fontaine, 18, of Grand Coulee, Wash., on charges of misconduct and abusing prisoners at the North Severn brig.

Thus came to a close the series of courts martial of enlisted personnel involved in the operation of an alleged "kangeroo court" at the brig, which serves the Severn River Naval Command.

Three Marine guards accused of maltreating prisoners were acquitted, but a fourth, Pfc. Arthur E. Fannin, jr., of Logan, W. Va., was cleared of two counts only.

Rear Adm. James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent, who convened the courts martial, has yet to hand down a decision on the court's finding on four other charges against Fannin.

The counts of which the court apparently convicted Fannin were beating two prisoners with a leather belt, burning another with a cigarette and threatening a fourth.

Two other defendants were given prison sentences and a bad conduct discharges yesterday.

Antipollution Group to Plan Action in Md.

Annapolis, Md., June 25 (AP).—The Maryland Water Pollution Control Commission will hold its first meeting tomorrow at Baltimore to discuss the start of its program under a new law aimed at cleaning up State waters.

The commission, recently appointed by Governor Lane, is headed by Dr. Joseph H. McLain of Washington College and the Kent Manufacturing Co.

One of its first problems will be selecting an executive secretary, provided for under the law, to give full-time supervision to the anti-pollution program.

The budget proposals are being studied by the Standard Salary Board, and the State Employment Commission is preparing classifications for its various workers.

In any event, the new commission will not have funds to act until the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1.

Tomorrow's session will be held at the Sears Roebuck Community Hall at 1 p. m.

Besides Dr. McLain, members of the board are Walter F. Perkins, Dr. Robert H. Riley, head of the Department of Health; Dr. R. V. Truitt, head of the Department of Research and Education; John E. Clark, chairman of the Board of Natural Resources, and Ernest A. Vaughn, director of the Game and Inland Fish Commission.

Depression Insurance

You keep telling us now is the wrong time to buy. Things are too high. Prices are coming down, etc. Why not buy some insurance against this? Featuring several houses at $11,750; $820 cash for veterans, $2,000 cash for non-veterans. Monthly payments in both instances approximately $80 per month. You couldn't rent the same home if it were available for $120 per month and there would be no return on this monthly rent. Approximately one-half of the $80 each month reduces the principal. About 90% of the other $40, including taxes and interest, can be deducted from your income tax. How can you afford not to buy one of these extremely nice 5-room homes, including over 18-ft. living room with charming fireplace, also dining room and kitchen, 2 bedrooms and tiled bath; also, stairway to a large attic for expansion. The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Wallace's Olive Branch Reportedly Rejected By Truman in Prelude to Watergate Speech

By Drew Pearson

"The District Line" by Bill Gold is being suspended during Bill's vacation.

It's no great secret that Harry Truman doesn't like Henry Wallace—though few people realize how bitter he really is. However, it was supposed to be a secret that Henry made an indirect bid for reconciliation with Harry just before his climactic speech in Washington's Potomac Park last week.

Wallace had written one significant paragraph in his speech offering his services to President Truman or General Marshall to go to Russia to try to patch up peace between the two countries.

His plan was to offer whatever good will he had with the Russians to try to iron out the snarls in American-Russian relations and try to get the two countries back on an even, amicable keel.

But before delivering his speech, Wallace had his chief adviser, Harold Young, sound out the White House as to how Truman might receive the proposal. Word came back in picturesque Truman language to this effect: "I wouldn't send that so-and-so anyplace."

So Henry Wallace changed his mind, dropped the paragraph out of his speech. Some advisers urged him to offer his services publicly anyway, and let Truman have the embarrassment of turning him down. But Wallace ruled otherwise.

In Wake of Labor Battle

GOP leaders wisecracked that the only reason President Truman invited North Dakota's Senator Milton Young to the special White House luncheon on the labor bill was to make sure the taxpayers and not the President paid for the luncheon. If members of both parties are present, the cost is charged to official entertainment. If not, the President has to pick up the check himself . . . Most people have forgotten that GOP Congressman Fred Hartley of New Jersey, co-author of the Taft-Hartley labor bill, is the same Congressman who was promised $10,000 of campaign contributions by the National Retail Dry Goods Association—if he helped kill price control. (Wonder if Congressman Hartley has tried to buy any meat lately) . . . Senator Claude Pepper of Florida tells close friends the congressional battle over President Truman's veto of the Taft-Hartley labor bill marks the beginning of a "permanent cleavage" between liberals and conservatives in both political parties and may serve as the foundation for a new third-party movement. . . . Pepper, however, declares: "I am a Democrat and will not be associated in any way with a third party if one does eventuate in 1948." . . . The two Cabinet members who fought hardest against any veto of the labor bill were Secretary of the Navy Forrestal and Secretary of Commerce Harriman. Both Wall Street bankers, both wanted Truman to sign the bill. They told Truman that if Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach had a right to present labor's viewpoint, they had as much right to present the businessman's viewpoint . . . At a secret meeting of labor chiefs with White House attaches, John L. Lewis promised to pressure West Virginia's GOP Senator Revercomb and Kentucky's GOP Senator Cooper to sustain the President if he vetoed the bill. John L., however, never delivered . . . Union chiefs warned at this same secret meeting that unless the Taft-Hartley bill was vetoed, labor would not go to the polls next year.

Hollywood in Czechoslovakia

In Czechoslovakia, the Russians forced the Czech government to use 60 per cent Russian films. However, working closely with the State Department, Hollywood sent carefully selected features to Czechoslovakia, including "Wilson," Darryl Zanuck's story of Woodrow Wilson, "Abraham Lincoln in Illinois," and others.

Result: The Czechs flocked to theaters in such numbers that American films ran overtime. People waited in queues a block long to see them. Some theater managers—in order to comply with the Russian edict—had to begin showing American movies at midnight.

This got under the Russian skin. Now they have changed their tactics, requiring Czechs to make their own films—but with Russian money, talent and supervision. This way they hope to bar all foreign films.

Note—Yet Pennsylvania's GOP Congressman Gavin and other isolationists claim the State Department should not be permitted to send propaganda abroad.

Grin and Bear It

"I told you I could only afford a week's vacation and coming to this pokey old resort will make it seem like a month"

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

You are defending the East cards of today's three no-trump contract and West opens the queen of hearts. Study only the East and North cards, then plan your defense.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable

♠ 8 6 3
◇ A 6
♣ K Q J 10 5 3

	NORTH
♠ Q 10 4 2		♠ J 9 7
♡ Q J 10 5	WEST	♡ A 6 4 3
◇ 10 9 3 2		◇ K 5 4
♣ 6	SOUTH	♣ A 7 2
	♠ A K 5
	♡ K 9 8
	◇ Q J 8 7
	♣ 9 8 4

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Q ♡.

East defeats declarer by a Deschapelles coup, deliberately sacrificing an honor in order to remove a vital entry from dummy. East sees that South can probably win an easy game by setting up North's clubs, then getting in with the diamond ace to cash them. But if the diamond ace is knocked out before the clubs are established, game may be saved.

East, therefore, overtakes West's heart queen with the ace and lays down the king of diamonds, and declarer must win the ace. If he holds up, East will continue a diamond. Now declarer leads clubs, but East holds up his ace until the third round, and South is down. All he can take are three diamonds, two clubs, a heart and two spades for down one.

Declarer will easily take nine tricks without East's clever defense, losing a club and three hearts.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
